COUNCIL'S PREFACE.

THIS Dictionary of the modern Irish language, with explanations in English, is the outcome of a project conceived a few years ago by the members of the Council of the Irish Texts Society. On the initiation of Mr. G. A. Greene, M.A., then Vice-Chairman of the Council, they decided to compile, with the assistance of Irish speakers and scholars throughout Ireland and Great Britain, and under the direction of competent Editors, a small Irish-English Pocket Dictionary for the use of students of the modern tongue. As a foundation for this work, about 12,000 words were collected from existing glossaries, from the spoken language and from modern writings, and sorted into slip form. The Editors who were asked to carry out the task of editing this material, Father O'Leary and Mr. David Comyn and, at a later stage, Mr. John MacNeill, found themselves, through the pressure of other work, unable to fulfil their intention, and the help of Father Dinneen was eventually secured.

In carrying out his views as Editor, Father Dinneen found it necessary to make many alterations on the slips handed to him, involving labour which would not have been incurred had he been appointed in the first instance. Indeed, Father Dinneen has so amended and expanded the fragmentary materials submitted to him, that the present work may be regarded as practically his creation, and the Council gladly acknowledges its indebtedness to him for his severe and patriotic labours in bringing the work to a satisfactory conclusion.

The members of the Council wish to add their own sincere thanks to those of the Editor to all those gentlemen who have assisted the undertaking, either by reading proofs, or by the compilation of lists of local words, or by personal assistance rendered in different ways to the Editor. The names of those who have given financial aid will be found at the end of the volume. These marks of kindness and interest in the work have been of the greatest service, and have afforded much encouragement both to the Council and to the Editor.

Signed on behalf of the Council,

DOUGLAS HYDE, LL.D., President.

DANIEL MESCAL, Chairman.

ELEANOR HULL, Hon. Secretary.

EDITOR'S PREFACE.

THE study of the Modern Irish Language, which has received such an impetus in recent years, has been greatly hampered by the want of a convenient lexicon. Nothing but the urgent necessity that existed for such a lexicon could have induced me to abandon more congenial studies and devote my energies to the development and completion of the work so laudably undertaken by the Council of the Irish Texts Society. As I proceeded with the revision of the material supplied me the work grew imperceptibly under my hands. In preparing the work, I went through the whole of Peter O'Connell's MS. Dictionary, and also, though more rapidly, through the MS. Dictionary compiled by O'Naughton. The Gaelic Journal and the principal modern published texts were also laid under contribution, as well as several lists of words received from various parts of the country. Not the least valuable part of the work is what I was able to remember from the days of my childhood, the rich vocabulary employed by my father and mother and the inhabitants of my native Sliabh Luachra, the snatches of song, of story, of proverb, the allusions and rhymes and exclamations which mingled with their conversation, as well as the precise and accurate use of phrase and idiom which distinguished them.

In spite of many defects, it is claimed for this work that it contains a larger number of words used in the living Irish language and in the more modern written compositions than any Irish Dictionary yet published; that it gives the various words fuller grammatical treatment; that it explains them more in detail and with greater precision and accuracy; that it gives a fuller account of local usage and pronunciation; that it treats more fully the more important words which form the basis of the main idioms that constitute the core of the language; that it gives a greater number of peculiarly poetical expressions; a fuller list of technical words and a more copious supply of examples drawn from the living speech of the people; that it has a more abundant list of references to modern standard works; that it deals more exhaustively and with fuller illustration with the various particles whose uses and functions are calculated to puzzle the student. It is claimed that the book gives a fairly accurate explanation in English of the main stream of words, idioms and forms that constitute the Modern Irish Language. Absolute completeness, either in the list of words or in the idioms, is not claimed, the time and space limits and other circumstances affecting the production of the work rendering such completeness impossible. In the insertion of compound words, which form an important factor in the language, space had to be economized.

It is obvious that in an unsettled language like Irish, which has not been cultivated to any extent since the use of print became general, many orthographical difficulties present themselves to the lexicographer. Complete uniformity of spelling is certainly a great desideratum. Indeed, it is impossible to conceive a flourishing literature in an age of printing like the present without a uniform orthography of some kind.

The science of grammar becomes a mockery where there is not some show of uniformity in the written forms of the words, and students of the language are disheartened by an unsettled and ever varying orthography. The circumstance that the language has been growing apace, as all languages grow, for the last couple of hundred years, without in many parts of the country the check of a written or printed literature, has resulted in its forming itself into two or three more or less clearly defined dialects which differ from one another in several points. The Irish spoken in the Extreme North of Ireland differs from that spoken in Munster, and that spoken in Connaught differs from both. The Irish of South Connaught approaches that of Munster, while that of North Connaught resembles that of Ulster. As regards the orthography employed, perhaps the only item that will seem somewhat radical is the uniform use of sc, sp, st, in preference to sg, sb, rd, respectively, but especially the use of sc for sg. On this point it may be observed that these sets of letter-combinations in general follow the same law, and that it is desirable to adopt a uniform system. In our books and dictionaries there is great confusion between the combinations sc and sg, and the time seemed to have come for writing uniformly one or the other. The question was, which should be selected. The selection of sc is only the natural lexicographical evolution. O'Naughton, the author of our earliest modern dictionary (finished 1727), writes sc for the most part, and devotes only a few pages to words beginning with sg. O'Brien (1767) states in his dictionary that sc and sg are absolutely identical, and that words spelled with sc will not be repeated under sg. O'Reilly made much the same observation, while Peter O'Connell (1826), whose work is most laborious, systematic, and comprehensive, writes sc in, every case. Of the living authorities who were consulted on this question opinion was divided. I may mention that Dr. Standish Hayes O'Grady, Professor Strachan, and Dr. Joyce, approved of the exclusive use of sc, while Father Peter O'Leary, Mr. Bergin, Mr. Lloyd, and others, favoured sg. There can be no question, of course, that sg is far more common in modern manuscripts, and up to a recent date at least was more common in books. As regards the sound of the language used at the present day opinion also differs, some maintaining that the sound after s is g, and others that it is c. I think that the sound is in many cases sc, and in most other cases approaches nearer to sc than to sg. It seems to me that in words like scéal, sceimh, scilling, where sc is followed by a slender vowel, the s is more affected than the c, the s becomes sh rather than c g. This sh sound of s, I believe, makes many think that a g-sound and not a c-sound is heard. In words like scoil, to my ear at least, the sound is c. With regard to plural forms like páistidhe, which some now write páistí, and prátaidhe, which they write prátaí, only the longer form is given in these pages. That form is given as being the best established, though it is undoubtedly cumbrous and awkward to a degree. Both forms would have been given except that it seemed a needless waste of space to do so, and hence the exclusion of the shorter form is not to be regarded as prejudicing its claims. There can be no doubt that the tendency will always be in the direction of retrenching unsounded letters, and making the spelling square with the pronunciation. But the process must be gradual and, as it were, imperceptible. The diphthong éa has been used throughout instead of eu. I have followed Peter O'Connell in writing - idheacht or -aidheacht as the termination of abstract nouns, thus tromaidheacht, not tromuigheacht, though the verb is written tromuighim.

The diphthong eo and not eó is written throughout except in a few cases, and triphthongs are not in general accented. The diphthong ea is used in preference to io in unaccented syllables, thus Éireann not Éirionn. It has been found convenient for lexicographical order to observe the caol le caol law even in compounds, though there are some instances of departure from it, But it should be noted that the observance of this law is not intended to prejudice the pronunciation. Words like leith-scéal, leith-cheann are largely but not universally pronounced as if written leath-scéal and leath-cheann; thus we say deis-bhéalach and not deas-bhéalach, etc. Though many hints regarding the pronunciation of words are scattered through the book, it was found impossible to treat the pronunciation of each word in a systematic manner, without unduly enlarging the work.

The more important verbals are given a separate heading; sometimes they have uses distinct from those of the corresponding verbs. The verbs are given under their first singular indicative, as this arrangement is generally adopted in modern vocabularies. The unsettled state of orthography of the language often necessitated the repetition of the same word under different forms, and recourse was had to phonetic spelling when the origin or etymology of the word was uncertain.

An effort has been made, as far as the limits of the work permitted, to give examples of the principal idioms that involve the prepositions and other important words, but it is obvious that there are many idioms depending on the collocation of words which can be learned only by practice.

The treatment of local words, some of which are of very doubtful genuineness, was a matter of some anxiety. In some parts of the country certain English words have got an extraordinary twist, and in the mouths of Irish speakers pass for genuine Irish words. Moreover, words that are really Irish are sometimes very much corrupted locally, and the corrupted forms are of doubtful advantage to a lexicon. The local use of words, however, when properly ascertained, is of great assistance in determining their origin and meaning.

A word may be said about modern loan words. They are practically all taken immediately from the English, though many are loan words even in English. Some have been introduced with scarcely any change of pronunciation, but with a somewhat altered or extended meaning. Thus scéiméir is from schemer, but is used in a peculiar way in Irish; sórt is from sort, but not identical in use with the English word. Many English words get an Irish terminal form as crúca from crook, and the termination -áil, of the verbal noun is often added to English verbs ag teindeáil, tending, and the like. Of forms like these, some have got a footing in the language, while others, as the one just quoted, must be regarded as barbarous.

With regard to the general question of the insertion of loan words in a dictionary or their use in the spoken and written language, it is to be said that words that are established in the written language, being used by good authors, or words in everyday conversational use, should find a place in a dictionary, from whatever source they may be derived. The lexicographer may deplore the introduction of loan words, but he is bound to recognise their existence. Of course, words not well established or not widely used, have not the same claim to recognition. In the following pages I have in general given those loan words which have a footing in the spoken or written language, especially when they have acquired a new shade of meaning. In writing the language, words only recently borrowed and for which there are Irish equivalents, should be sparingly used. It is otherwise with words that have already a life of a couple of hundred years in the language. Every tongue borrows from other tongues, and it is a sign of health and vigour when a language can assimilate a crop of foreign words and reduce them to subjection by the rigorous application of its own syntax and of its own inflexional forms.

Want of space prevented my treating of the derivation of the bulk of the words in the dictionary, or of tracing their relationship to words in kindred tongues. It need scarcely be stated here that modern Irish is substantially the same language as Scotch Gaelic and as Manx, that it bears to the Welsh and Breton languages a kinship similar to that which exists between modern English and modern German, that it is a development of a language which was cognate to the earlier forms of the great family of languages spoken and written in modern Europe, that though its vocabulary has been considerably influenced by Latin within historic times, and by English within the last three centuries, it has preserved its own syntax and its own characteristic inflexional system practically untampered with even to this day. Its syntactical and inflexional systems have, indeed, been subject to a development similar to the development which takes place in the successive stages of every living and cultivated speech, but neither its syntax nor its inflexional system has been influenced to any great extent by neighbour tongues.

I owe a debt of gratitude to my friend, Mr. John J. O'Kelly, for the tireless energy which he devoted to the work from the outset. His extensive knowledge of the living language rendered his co-operation particularly valuable.

My friend, Mr. J. H. Lloyd, looked over all the MS. and read the proofs carefully, and the work owes much to his extensive knowledge of local forms and his critical acumen.

The following gentlemen, all of whom are well skilled in the living language, kindly looked over the proofs and noted local usages, etc.: Messrs. John J. O'Kelly, P.O'Shea (Glengarriff), P. J. O'Shea ("Conán Maol"), J. C. Ward (Killybegs), J. Craig, J. Rogers (Barrow-in-Furness), T. Concannon, R. A. Foley, M. Breathnach. Messrs. J. J. Doyle and M. O'Malley looked over a portion of the proofs. Special mention should be made of Mr. Richard Foley's keen interest in the work from the beginning, and of the zeal with which he sought out and recorded local usages.

Among those who helped by supplying lists of words I may mention Rev. M. McGrath, St. Mary's, Rathmines; Messrs. D. O'Callaghan (Aran), O'Donnell (Newport, O'Doherty (Cruit Island), R. A. Foley, John J. O'Kelly, J. C. Ward (Killybegs), Seamus O'Kelly, (Belfast, M. O'Brien (Ballyvourney), D. D. Murphy (Valentia), T. Hayes, P. O'Daly. Dr. J. P. Henry also took a great interest in the work all through its progress, and furnished useful lists of local words.

To Miss Eleanor Hull, Hon. Sec. of the Irish Texts Society, who took a keen personal interest in the work from the beginning, I am indebted for much sympathetic encouragement and many useful suggestions.

I wish to record my appreciation of the kindness I received from Mr. J. J. MacSweeney and assistants of the Royal Irish Academy, Mr. Lyster and assistants of the National Library of Ireland, Mr. De Burgh, Mr. Hall and assistants of Trinity College Library.

The labour of seeing the work through the press was considerably lightened by the intelligence and efficiency displayed by the staff of Messrs. Sealy, Bryers and Walker.

Although this work was laid on my shoulders quite unexpectedly, it is curious to recall that the production of an Irish Dictionary was one of the dreams of my boyhood. If the realisation of that dream be not as splendid as the original conception, it is some compensation to reflect that the work, in spite of many imperfections, will be useful to thousands of students, and will help on the work of cultivating the rich and vigorous, but sadly neglected, language of the Gael.

v. tr. verb transitive.

After nouns, the genitive singular and nominative plural are given; after verbs (which are given in the 1st person singular, indicative mood), the verbal is given; after adjectives, the dative singular feminine, which is also in general the same as the comparative and superlative, is given; many adjectives, from the nature of the case, are not used in the comparative or superlative, but are nevertheless declined in the positive degree; after compound nouns, in most cases, the genitive and plural are not given when they are identical with those of the terminal simple nouns.

The general rule followed in setting down the inflectional termination after the words is to repeat the last letter of the invariable portion of the word, thus bronntóir, -óra, -óiridhe, signifies that the genitive case of bronntóir is bronntóra, and its nominative plural is bronntóridhe; where, however, the inflexional termination is purely an addition to the noun, the last letter is generally not repeated, thus fuath, -a, signifies that fuatha is the genitive case of fuath.

a (ailm), the first letter of the Modern Irish alphabet.
a, interj., prefixed to voc. case, often slurred over in pronunciation; sometimes its place is supplied by an apostrophe, sometimes it is simply omitted.
a, weakened form of the prep. and verbal prefix do (or de), as a dhíth orm = do (de) dhíth orm, wanting to me; dul a bhaile = dul don (or do) bhaile, going home; a chlog = do (de) chlog or don (den) chlog, of the clock, o'clock; síol a chur = síol do chur, to sow seed.
a, sometimes separated from verbs of which it is etymologically a part, as a tá = atá, a deir = adeir.

- a, particle used before numerals when they do not qualify nouns, as a haon, one, the number one; a cúig, five.
- a, colloquially prefixed as a kind of helping particle to some words and phrases, as a choidhche for choidhche, a riámh for riámh, a bheith for bheith (as well as for do bheith); a lán, a great many; a bheag no a mhór, little or much.
- a, prep. (a variety and development of prep. i, and used in preference to i in all modern MSS. at present i is more in favour in printed Irish, though a represents the sound more closely. In the earlier MSS. a is used instead of i before consonants followed by broad vowels), in, into. See i.
- a, prep., out of; no change in consonants, prefixes h to vowels, becomes as before article, rel. prn. and poss. adj. Cpd. asam, out of me; asat, asad, thee; as, him, it; aisti, her, it; asainn, us; asaibh, you; asta, them. Instead of a, as is now in common use as simple prep. See as, prep.
- a, relative particle, aspirating, arising from the weakening of verbal prefixes, and only recently introduced into literature, as nuair a tháinig a. = nuair tháinig a., when a. came. The rel. prn. in nom. or acht. case does not require any equivalent in Irish, but this particle is often used where the rel. would occur.
- a, rel. prn., eclipses, but becomes ar before past tenses, aspirating in active, and causing no change in consonants but prefixing h to vowels in passive voice. (1) all who, all which, all whom, all that; (2) after prep., whom, which.
- a, poss. a. (1) her, its (f.) prefixes h- to vowels; (2) his, its (m.), aspirates; (3) their, eclipses, prefixes n- to vowel.
- a, weakened colloquial form of art and interrog. part. an between consonants; and of prep. ag before consonants of verbal noun used participially; also of d'a or ag a in such phrases as an fear a (go) bhfuair a mhac bás, the man whose son died.
- a! interj., ah! oh! an exclamation of surprise or disgust. a! mo thruagh thí, oh! I pity you.
- ab, dep. form of verb is, joined to preceding particle; munab, gurab, nárab. In opt. often shortened to a before consonants, as gura seacht bhfeárr do bheimid i mbárach, may we be seven times better tomorrow.
- abha, g. abhann, d. abhainn, npl. aibhne, gpl. abhann (somet. n. abhainn, g. abhainne or aibhne), f., a river, a stream.
- abhach, -aigh, m., the entrails of any beast (= ionathar).
- abhac, -aic, pl. id., m., a dwarf, a pigmy, a sprite, an elf.
- abac, -aic, pl. id., m., a ferret, a little terrier, a sort of cur used for baiting ferrets in their dens. (P. O'C.)
- abhadh, m., a trepanning or ensnaring; a kind of purse-net used in fishing. (Ker.)
- abhaile, ad., home, towards home, homewards.
- abhaill, indec. f., an orchard (Don.).
- abhainn, see abha.
- abair, imper., of adeirim, which see.
- abairt, -bartha, f., speech, articulation; politeness; a sentence.
- abaidh (also aibidh), -dhe, a., ripe, mature; quick-witted (of persons).
- abaidheacht, -a, f., ripeness, maturity.
- abaighim, vl. aibiughadh; v. tr., I cause to ripen, bring to maturity, cause; is é d'abaigh mo dhéara, it is it that caused my tears; is é d'abaigh créim agus cnead im thaobh, it is it that caused a gnawing and a pain in my side; v. int., I ripen, come to maturity; d'abaigh an radharc aige, his eye-sight came to maturity, his vision returned to him. See aibighim.
- ábalta, a., able (with ar) (A.). We do not say (except in Don.) fear ábalta, an able man, but tá sé ábalta ar é dhéanamh, he is able to do it.
- ábaltacht, -a, f., ability (A.) (rare).
- abhantur, -uir, m., success; an adventure.
- abar, -air, m. (obar). a marsh; clay or peat used for manure; met., a difficulty; abar na gcapall, the puddle of the horses (Der.) duine d'fhágáil 'san abar, to leave a person in a fix; tá mé i n-abar (obar), I am in a bog, in a difficulty.

abhas, -ais, m., a mercenary soldier; a fierce, violent man. See amhas.

abhastar, See amhastar.

abhastrach, See amhastrach.

abb, -badh, -badha, m., an abbot.

abb-mháthair, -thar, -áithreacha and -áithre, f., the Mother-abbess.

abhcóid, -e (adhbhcóid) f., ironical joking, scolding; pleading a case.

abhcóide (adhbhcóide), g. id.; pl., -didhe, m., an advocate, a pleader; abhcóideach, id.

abhcóididheacht (adhbhcóideacht), -a, f., disputation, pleading, scolding.

abdhaíne, gen. id., f., an abbotship.

abhfogas (i bhfogas), close by, near to; a bhfogus dam, near me. See fogas.

ablach, -aigh pl. -aighe and ablacha, m., a carcass, a corpse, carrion.

abhlann, -ainne, -anna, f., a wafer, altar-bread; abhlann coisrigthe, the Consecrated Host.

abhóg, -óige, -óga, f., a sudden jump or bounce. See adhbhóg.

abób, -óige, -óga, f., a falsehood (Don.).

abhlóir, -óra, -óridhe, m., one who is continually grumbling; a buffoon; a fool who affects being a wise man.

abhra, -adh, -aidhe, f., an eye-lid. See fabhra.

abra, -adh, -aidhe, f., a poem, a saying.

abhráiseach, -sighe, -seacha, f., a carder or spinner of wool; mná abhraisighe, women carders or spinners (also amhráiseach).

abhráiseach, -sighe, a., given to wool-carding or spinning; mná abhráiseacha, women carders or spinners (also amhráiseach.)

Abrán, -áin, m., April. See Aibreán.

abhrán, m., song. Technically, a poem in modern vowel assonance, as distinct from dán, a poem in the old syllabic metres. See amhrán.

abhránacht, -a, f., song, songmaking. See amhrántacht, amhránaidheacht.

abhras, -ais, pl. id., m., a ready answer.

abhras, -ais, pl. id., m., a yarn, the product of the hand; mná abhras, women spinners or carders.

abhsán, -áin, m., trench, a hollow.

absolóid, -e, f., absolution, forgiveness (also aspolóid).

abstal, -ail, pl. id., m., an apostle (also apstal, aspal).

abstalda, a., apostolic.

abú, interj., to victory! perh. abbrev. for go buaidh. Used in battle-cries, as Crom abú! Lámh dhearg abú!

abhus (i bhfus), on this side, in this life, this world, as opposed to the next. (Opposed to thall.)

ach! interj., a deprecatory exclamation, no! ach níl, ah, no! ach aidhe! exclamation of wonder.

ach, the general pron. of the prep. and conj. acht, and sometimes the written form of the same. See acht.

aca, prep. pr. 3 pl., at them, etc. See ag, prep.

achadh, -aidh, m., a field, land, a plain: Ireland is called Achadh Airt, etc.

acaire, g. id., pl. -idhe, m., a handy implement (Don.). See acar and acra.

acairim, -aradh, v. tr., I moor, I anchor.

acais, -e, -idhe, and -eacha, f., a slur, a curse, poison.

acaiseach, -sighe, a., venomous, rancorous, malicious (also aiciseach).

acaistear. See acastóir.

acaointeach, -tighe a., querulous, complaining. See éagcaointeach.

acar, -air, m., a tool, an instrument, etc.; profit, loan or use of a thing. See acra.

achar, -air, m., an extent of space, or time, distance, space, room; a journey.

acar-pholl, m., a place for mooring, a road for ships. (Ker.)

acarsuidhe, m., a port, a harbour. (Ker.)

aon (in comp. aon-, aoin-), one, a single one, only, the only (often with amháin); the one, the same, any; at all, with neg. no, none, not any: aon is fiche, aon ar fhichid, twenty-one; aon duine, aon neach, any one, anybody; with neg., no one, nobody; aon eile, another; aon lá amháin, one day, once upon a time; aon le, together with; aon nídh, anything; with neg., nothing; aon uair, aon uair amháin, once, once upon a time; ar aon, together; mar aon, along with, together with; gach aon, every one. aon is sometimes accented, and forms one word with the following nouns, as: bhíomar araon ar aon-scoil, we both attended the same school; comhrac aon-fhir, single combat; but it is not accented in phrases like ní haon mhaiteas duit bheith ag cainnt, there is no use in your talk; níl agam acht aon scilling amháin, I have but a single shilling, and should then be regarded as a separate word. The accentuation of aon takes place when emphasis is to be laid on the singleness, unity, or identity of the idea conveyed by the following word; thus, níl aon bhrígh leis an bhfocal sain, that word has no meaning; but aoin-bhrígh is eadh atá leis an dá fhocal, both words have one and the same meaning. In the first of these two sentences aon is not emphasised, and should not form one word with brígh. If the word amháin follow in the sentence it sometimes takes the emphasis off aon. aon was in the 16th century, and is in modern times, often written éan, and in compounds aoin becomes éin. an objection to these forms is this, that frequently in poetry aon has to be pronounced aoin (with broad n), which is a recognised sound of ao in Con. and U.; but the spelling éan does not lend itself to that sound.

do-, dó- (doi-, dói-) (1) negative prefix (before adj.), ill-, un-, in-, dis-; often implies difficulty or impossibility: do-dhéanta, hard to be done, impossible; is combined with genitive of substantives to form adjectives: do-fhaisnéise, unspeakable; (2) intensive prefix (before aubst. or adj.), very, exceedingly.

dó, subst. form of numeral, two; an dó, the two; when used with noun, becomes dá; fá dhó, twice.

do, sign of the past tenses; verbal particle used in perfect tense; in act., aspirates; in pass., does not aspirate, but prefixes h- to vowels; is somet. prefixed to cond.; in comb. with ní and go, ro is used for do, hence níor, gur, nár, 7c.

do, poss. prn., (inflecting), thy; before vl., used as the subj. of an intrans. or the obj. of a trans.; 'do (often for id'), in thy.

dó, prep. prn., to him, to it (m.); for him, for it; emph. dó-san. See do, prep.

do, prep. prefix in comp. verbs, as do-chím, do-bheirim, 7c.

do, prep. [in pronom. combinations, dam (damh still in Ulster, as in the early modern literary usage), duit, dó, dí (f.), dúinn, daoibh, dóibh; dam with the emphatic sa becomes generally damh-sa; dáibh is poet. for dóibh; díbh is often used for daoibh], to, for. This particle has very varied applications with the dative case; after adjectives it expresses involuntary relations, as distinguished from voluntary relations expressed by le: thus, is maith dham, it is good for me, but is maith liom, I like; is eagal dó, he should fear; is eagal leis, he fears; is éigin dó, he must, etc.; after adj. like inchreidthe, proper to be believed, etc.; is inchreidthe dó, he should believe; used after substantives and verbs as dativus commodi: ith é sin duit féin, eat that (for yourself); chuaidh sé chum suime dhó, he profited by it; in adv. clauses like i ngar do, near to; i bhfogus do, id.; used in genitive sense or poss. prn.: cad is ainm duit, what is your name? used of agent after verbals: tar éis teacht dó, after he had come; iar mbeith ag seasamh dó, as he stood, etc.; after verbs of granting, bestowing, promising, displaying, permitting, happening, etc.: do gheall sé airgead dam, he promised me money; sometimes the verb is omitted: ní mar sin damh-sa, that is not the case with me; cad é sin dam-sa? what is that to me? used in adverb., prep., and conj. phrases, as, dom dheoin, with my will; do ghnáth, usually; do réir mo thuairime, in my opinion; dom' dhóigh, as I think; do shíor, continually; do (= de) bhrígh go, because; d'á dhruim sin, because of that; d'eagla go, lest, for fear that; do láthair, in the presence of; used with dative to express instrument: dubhaint sé go ngeobhadh sé do'n speil air, he said he would assault him with the scythe; ag gabháil do chosaibh ann, trampling on, kicking it; after verbs of motion: chuaidh sé do'n Spáin, he went to Spain; to express the time in which an event occurred: lá d'á rabhas, 7c., on a day as I was, etc.; do ló is d'oidhche, night and day; used in a partitive sense (= de): smut do mhaide, a piece of a stick; of or concerning (= de): labhrann sé do ghrásá, he speaks of grace; used as a prefix to the vl., both tr. and intr.; with the intr. vl. do is used only when the subject of the vl. is expressed immediately before: thus, do b'áil leis na fir do dhul abhaile, he liked that the men should go home, but do b'áil leis an bhfear dul abhaile, the man liked to go home; with tr. vl.: lucht tighthe do dhéanamh, builders of houses; fear na ndán do cheapadh, the man who composes poems. See de, prep.

Gírlé Guairle, g. id., hurly-burly; confusion (P. O'C.). The word occurs also as the name of a woman in a folktale. A woman had a vast quantity of wool, flax, etc., to spin, and was at her wits' end to find time to do it, when a strange woman entered her house, and, on learning her perplexity, offered to take away the wool and flax, and return them in the shape of cloth, but would keep them herself in case the owner of the flax and wool did not remember her name when she returned. She departed, taking with her the flax and wool, and the other kept repeating the name Gírlé Guairle, which she gave her. After some days she quite forgot the name, and remained for weeks in great distress, as she believed she had now lost her yarn for ever. One day as she wandered by some lonely rath she heard the sound as of a woman spinning. As she spun she sang "Dá mbeadh fhios ag an mnaoi úd gur Gírlé Guairle m'ainm, bheinn-se féin gan bréid gan anairt" "Did that woman know that Gírlé Guairle was my name, I should myself be without frieze or yarn." The listener rejoiced to hear the long-lost name, and kept assiduously repeating it till the owner of it returned with the cloth. She welcomed the visitor by name, saying "Dé do bheatha id' shláinte, a Ghírlé Guairle" to which the other replied angrily, and, leaving the cloth behind her, vanished.

N

n (nuin ,the ash tree), the eleventh letter of the Modern Irish alphabet.
n, a remnant of case ending projected to the word following, producing what is called eclipsis of the succeeding initial consonant. It remains n- before vowels, d and g; becomes m before b, and affects the consonants t, c, p, f, making them sound like d, g, b, f, which latter are respectively written before them thus dt, gc, bp, bhf. It is found after the numerals seacht, ocht, naoi, deich; after the pronouns, ar, our; bhar, your; a, their; after prep. i (a); after relative combined with prep.; after the article when a noun is governed by a prep., though often aspiration of the initial consonant supplies its place (preps. do and de do not project n); after preps, ending in a vowel before poss. pr., le n-a láimh, ó n-a cheann; feacht n-aon, gach nduine, etc., are found in modern MSS.
ná, neg. part., used before imperatives, not, do not; ná buail, do not strike; before vowels h is inserted, as ná hiarr, do not ask; used imperatively even in 1st sing.: ná cluinim, let me not hear; used also before some optatives; e.g. ná rabhad, may I not be; dealbh go deo ná rabhair, may you never be wretchedly poor; ná raibh an fhaid sin de tuigheachán bliadhna ort; na rabhaid gan teacht, etc., etc. (with other verbs nár is used).
ná, conj., nor, neither; níl ór ná airgead agam, I have neither gold nor silver.
ná (nach), conj., that not, is fior ná ful, used indiscriminately with is fíor nach bhfuil, it is true that there is not, etc. (ná is used generally in M., nach in Leath Chuinn); before pf. tense it combines with ro, becoming nár (ná + ro), nachar (nach + ro). See nár and nachar.
ná, used as an enumerative and descriptive particle, namely, is iad na fir a bhí ann ná Tomás, Seaghán, 7c. the men who were there were Thomas, John, etc.
ná, conj., for (Don. and Mayo); prob. the same as nó. See nó (3).
'na, abbrev. for i n-a, in his, in her, in its, in their, in whom, in which, in what.
na, gf. and also pl. of an, def. article, the.
-na (and -ne), an emphatic particle used after 1st person pl., as ar bhfear-na, our man.
'ná, for ioná, than, used after comparatives; is féárr suidhe i n-aice 'ná suidhe i n-ionad, it is better to sit beside it than sit in its place.
nach, conj., (eclipses in modern Irish), that not; ó nach (colloq. uair nach), since not; go nach (go dtí nach), until not; assertive verb is omitted after nach (which does not then eclipse); is fíor nach díon dóibh crainn, it is true that trees afford them no shelter; before pf. tense it combines with ro becoming nachar, which see; after negatives, expressed or implied, ná go is used in M. for nach; the eclipsis caused by nach is quite modern; beag nach, beagnach, little but, almost, nearly.

nach (an interrog. part, used in a neg. form), what? how? is . . not? nach flíuch atá an lá, how wet the day is! nach deaf an buachaill é, what a nice boy he is (ironically); nach é seo Tadhg? is this not Tadhg?

nachar (aspirates), that . . . not, etc. (see nach), is the form used before past tense, let not, that may not; when ba, ab of the assertive v. are omitted, nachar = was it not, etc.; in colloquial usage nachar is now confined to U., and even there nár is as common; in M. and Con., nár only is used; often in U. nachar = M. ná gur in negative sentences.

PARADIGMS OF THE IRREGULAR VERBS

GENERAL REMARKS.

The dependent form of the verb is that used in the imperative mood and after ní, not; an, interrog. part.; nach, interrog. neg. part.: go, that; cá, where; muna, unless; dá, if, and the relative governed by a preposition. In these verbs in some tenses the independent or absolute form is distinct from the dependent form. Thus, adeirim, I say, but ní abraim, I do not say; bhéarad, I will give, but ní thiubhrad, I will not give; tá airgead agam, I have money, but an bhfuil airgead agat? have you money? The tendency of the modern development of the language is to break down the distinction between the two sets of forms and use one form in all cases. Indeed the perfection with which this distinction is observed may furnish a rough test of the purity and strength of the vernacular idiom in any district. The generation which has just passed away observed this distinction more scrupulously than the present. Thus, I remember old people say bhéarad or bhéaraidh mé scilling duit, I will give you a shilling, now one hears generally tabharfad scilling duit. In West Kerry good speakers now say níor chuaidh, while in East Kerry the proper form ní dheaghaidh (dheachaighd) is retained. The verb adeirim has a strong tendency to part with its dependent forms, especially in the future and conditional. One hears ní abraim (present), but also commonly ní déarfad (future). do-bheirim still holds its own in the present (do not being pronounced), especially in more solemn statements as (do-)bheirim mo bhanna dhuit, I solemnly assure you; but tugaim and tabhraim are also used. A perfect form do-bheir (old preterite, do-bheirt, 3rd singular) is heard in Kerry.

I have ventured to supply a 1st sing. imperat. which is peculiar in its use. In using this form the speaker commands not himself but another - he commands or entreats that a certain act be performed (the verb for which is not expressed), which will result in a certain consequence to himself, this consequence being expressed by this 1st singular form. It is used positively or negatively, and is distinct from the subj. or optat., thus: a bháin-chneis shéimh, faghaim fáth an éacht', 7c. (E. R.). Faghaim here is equivalent to innis dam (or tabhair dam). Ná faghaim annso a thuilleadh thú, which is equivalent to saying imthigh as so i dtreo ná faghad ann a thuilleadh thú, hence the speaker does not command or entreat himself, but indirectly he commands or entreats another. Ná faghaim focal eile asat is equivalent to éist or ciuinigh. Cf. similar uses of cluinim, feicim, 7c. This form is used idiomatically in conditional sentences, thus: ar uaislibh Connacht is bím im' cheannphort, let me be commander over the nobles of Connaught, that is, if I were commander, etc. This 1st sing. imper. is identical in form with the 1st sing. indic. (dependent), and this use of it is not found in Old or Middle Irish.

The subjunctive (optative) is still widely used in the spoken language: tabhair dam do lámh nó go rabhmaid (=mbeimíd) ag triall, give me your hand so that we may go on (start on our journey) (U.); "táim breoidh" "mhaise go rabhair"; "I am sick"; "indeed, may you be so"; "go bhfeicidh do chlann dealbh thú," "may your children see you poor"; "gheobhair fuacht," "mhaise go bhfaghad," "you will catch cold," "indeed I wish I may" (a strong expression of improbability); tabhair dam áthrach go bhfaghad deoch, give me a vessel that I may get a drink (subj. use). The past subj. is identical in form with the imperf. indic.

Only a few verbs such as atáim, cluinim, have preserved the synthetic form of the 2nd pl. pres. indicative in the sp. I.

The participle of necessity is still extensively used in M. and not quite extinct elsewhere: ní maoidhte sin ort, you are not to be envied on that account; níl sin maoidhte ort in Don. = you have fully earned it, you deserved well of it. Connus taoi? Mhaise, ní gearánta dham. How are you? Well I have no reason to complain; is déanta guidhe, orandum est, we must pray, cf. abartha (lit. to be said = witty, of a reply) (Con.). Fáigthe, in phr. má's fáigthe damh, if it is the case that I am to to be left(U.).

There appear to be very few survivals of the form in U.; in Don. the ion- p. a. is now very commonly employed instead, and, as in the case of the Don. use of maoidhte, noted above, it is constructed with tá and not with is, e.g. tá sé indéanta agat = is indéanta duit é, níl sé ionmhaoideort = ní hionmhaoideort é, having the same sense as the phrase with maoidhte; "acht anois ó shílim go bhfuil tú iontaobhtha" (Don. song); cf. Don. construction tá sé doiligh 'fhagháil = is deacair é d'fhagháil.

P. of nec. is sometimes distd. from past part, by being slender, curithe, part. of nec.; curtha, past p.; fáigthe, p. nec.; fágtha, p. p. But in M. tógtha = p. nec. and p. p., etc.

I. is, ASSERTIVE VERB.

ADDENDUM.

The substantive verb atáim (bím, fulim) has a set of quasi-passive forms: Indic. pres., táthar; dep. fuitear, fulteas; indic. habit., (bíthear); imperf., bíti; fut. beifear (beidhfear); cond., beifidhe (beidhfidhe); perf., bhítheas (bhíothas); dep., rabhthas; imperat., bíthear. Besides these, such forms as do bhíodh, do rabhadh are used in s. pl. These quasi-passive forms are of vital importance in the modern language. A complete enumeration of the varieties of them in living use, as well as illustrations of their application, must be reserved for a special treatise.

DICTIONARY FUND.

The Council of the Irish Texts Society, in recording the names of those friends of the Society who have come forward to aid the work of publication by donations or by contributing to the Guarantee Fund, wish to take this opportunity of acknowledging the cordial help and encouragement they have received from many friends, throughout the whole course of the undertaking. The interest shewn by Irish Students and by Irish men and women in all parts of the world, in the production of this Dictionary, has been a source of constant encouragement to all in any way engaged in pushing forward the work.

In raising the necessary funds the Council have also met with much sympathy. They wish to record their gratitude, in a special manner, to three friends who came forward at a critical moment and voluntarily offered loans of a considerable amount. These are, the Hon. Albinia Brodrick, who gave a loan of £200; Mr. John P. Boland, M.P., and Mr. John Twigg, who each contributed a loan of £100. They are also specially indebted to the Most Rev. Dr. Walsh, archbishop of Dublin, for constant proofs of interest and for the offer of £20, as a personal contribution to the work, if a sum of £400 could be raised in similar amounts. This offer, though it has not realized the total amount contemplated by His Grace, has produced the considerable sum of over £177 paid up, and £20 promised. The fact that several dioceses made efforts to contribute the required amount is interesting, and proves an extending concern for the advancement of Irish studies.

The names of the contributors to the Loan Guarantee Fund are as follows:

The Irish Texts Society was established in 1898 for the purpose of publishing texts in the Irish language, accompanied by such introductions, English translations, glossaries and notes, as might be deemed desirable.

The annual Subscription has been fixed at 7s. 6d. (American subscribers, two dollars), payable on January 1st of each year, on payment of which Members will be entitled to receive the annual Volume of the Society, and any additional volumes which they may issue from time to time.

Members joining the Society for the first time can still receive the Volumes published in 1899 and 1901, at the original Subscription of 7s. 6d. for each year, but these volumes will be shortly out of print.

Vol. 3 (1900) is now out of print.

The Committee make a strong appeal to all interested in the preservation and publication of Irish Manuscripts to join the Society and to contribute to its funds, and especially to the Editorial Fund, which has been established for the remuneration of Editors for their arduous work.

All communications should be addressed to the Hon. Secretary, Miss ELEANOR HULL, 20
