A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF UCC

I am pleased to extend a warm welcome to students from overseas who have chosen University College Cork for their degree studies. We will do our best to ensure that your stay with us will be academically rewarding and socially enjoyable. We have approximately 2000 international students studying at the University during a typical academic year. They come from a wide variety of backgrounds and cultures and do much to enhance and enrich life at the University. There are students from European Union countries, from the United States and Canada, Africa, the Middle East and the Far East.

We hope you will find the information in this booklet informative and helpful. It covers such matters as arrival arrangements and immigration procedures, campus services, accommodation costs and social life.

UCC has taken a number of steps to ensure that International Full Degree Students coming here receive all the attention and assistance they need. While your primary contacts will be with academic departments. The Support Officer for International Students has specific responsibility for the welfare of International Students while at UCC. A special Welcome Week Programme has been organised for new International Full Degree Students. I would like to take this opportunity to urge strongly your attendance at the Orientation Programme. It will allow us to provide you with a detailed introduction to the University and student life here, while giving you a little time to look around and familiarise yourself with Cork and with Irish life and culture before starting your studies.

Finally, we are confident that your stay with us will be a fruitful one and that you will leave Ireland with fond memories of your time spent in University College Cork.

Dr. Michael Murphy

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CORK: HISTORICAL SUMMARY

Built around a beautiful stone-faced quadrangle, University College Cork opened its doors to students in November 1849. So began over a century and a half of teaching and research on behalf of the local community and the nation.

In 1845 Sir Robert Peel's Colleges Bill had established three non-denominational Queen's Colleges at Cork, Galway and Belfast. Professors were appointed in August 1849 and soon afterwards the Colleges opened for students. In 1850 the Queen's University in Ireland was founded, with the power to confer degrees on the students of the three colleges.

The Irish University Education Act, 1879, provided for the formation of a new University, the Royal University of Ireland, and for the dissolution of the Queen's University.

In 1908, Birrel, Chief Secretary of Ireland, introduced the Irish Universities Act establishing the National University of Ireland and the Queen's University, Belfast, and in October of that year the Royal University was dissolved. University College Cork became one of the three constituent colleges of the National University of Ireland, the others being University College Dublin and University College Galway.

The Universities' Act, 1997, established UCC as a constituent university of the National University of Ireland. The official name is now University College Cork - National University of Ireland, Cork. The title "University College Cork" continues to be used on a day-to-day basis.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE CORK TODAY

University College Cork has four Colleges - Arts, Celtic Studies and Social Science; Business and Law; Science, Engineering and Food Science and Medicine and Health. Teaching is delivered through Schools and Departments of which there are over 60. There are almost 16,000 students pursuing undergraduate and postgraduate studies. To cater for the growth in student numbers, which has been particularly strong since the 1960s, a large scale building programme is ongoing. In addition, many older buildings have been refurbished and other buildings acquired for academic purposes. A modern campus has emerged from these developments, pleasantly combining early and modern architecture along a riverside garden setting close to the city centre. The campus radiates a warm and intimate atmosphere, which greatly enhances the learning environment.
