Plagiarism and Laundering

You must write the essay/assessment in your own words. All material 'copied' from textbooks must be indicated as such by the use of quotation marks and references (see below).

Plagiarism: Any use of material that is not credited in the above manner is easily recognisable; it constitutes 'plagiarism'. The use of plagiarised material will result in the essay being failed; it may also jeopardise your overall degree.

Laundering: The practice of taking the structure and ideas of an author, paraphrasing their work and failing to reference the source is related to plagiarism. This 'practice' also applies to the use of other students' essays/assessments. In its extreme form it will be considered as plagiarism and will be severely penalised.

Plagiarism Declaration

I have read and understood the above section on plagiarism and have properly referenced all direct quotations from books, journals or the internet. No substantial part of this essay has previously been submitted for assessment in any other module.
