Study Tours

Study tours are an integral part of the Summer School programme and give students the opportunity to explore the beauty of the Irish countryside and to experience the places examined in lectures and seminars. The study tours will bring students to Fota House and Cobh in County Cork, Adare, Co. Waterford, a picturesque coastal village and the site of an impressive range of early Christian monuments; Curraghmore, one of the most important country houses in Ireland. The social programme will include a theatre visit.

Costs

The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. The social programme will include a theatre visit.

Summer School Scholarships

A number of Scholarships to attend the 2018 Summer School in Irish Studies are available to EU citizens who attend for the full duration of the School. The Scholarship is valued at €750 and discounted from the Summer School fee. Those interested in applying should send the following:

(a) Their curriculum vitae.
(b) A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish Studies, and how the Scholarship will benefit their research and/or career in the field of Irish Studies.

Applications should be submitted on a letter of support directly to Ms Marie Riordan, Summer School Co-ordinator. All documentation must be received by the Summer School Co-ordinator, internationaloffice@ucc.ie by Friday, 9 March 2018. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/

Summer School in Irish Studies

Study Tours

Summer School in Irish Studies

Welcome from the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, including a long history of connections to the outside world. University College Cork has five times been named Ireland’s University of the Year and has one of Ireland’s oldest universities and has five student body, attracting students from over 80 countries worldwide.

The programme offers optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

The School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/

Welcome from the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, including a long history of connections to the outside world. University College Cork has five times been named Ireland’s University of the Year and has one of Ireland’s oldest universities and has five student body, attracting students from over 80 countries worldwide.

The programme offers optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

The School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/

The School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/

The School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/

The School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on campus. For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork, ‘Roseleigh’, Western Road, Cork, Ireland. Tel: +353-21-490 6740. Email: m.riordan@ucc.ie or internationaloffice@ucc.ie · Website: www.ucc.ie/international/
University College Cork

Founded in 1849, University College Cork is one of Ireland’s oldest universities and has five times been named Ireland’s University of the Year in recognition of excellence in teaching and research. UCC is a dynamic learning environment with a global outlook and makes a major contribution to Ireland’s economy and cultural identity.

Located in Cork, the second city of the Republic of Ireland, University College Cork is a vibrant teaching and research institute with a diverse student body, attracting students from over 80 countries worldwide. Cork city, placed in one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial centre. Founded in early medieval times, the city grew to become a major port with a long history of connections to Europe and the Americas. Through its port the city was the major point of departure for the Irish emigrating to the New World and the point of introduction of new ideas from the outside world.

Welcome from the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies at University College Cork. The School attracts many students with an interest in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Summer School 2018

In 2018, University College Cork holds its thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, literature and culture. For the month of July, students explore key turning-points in Ireland’s history that shaped its destiny and identity, and examine how modern Irish writers of international significance sought to define a sense of cultural identity.

In the History section, we explore the foundations of Irish identity and the quest for political independence. We examine the earliest expressions of Irish identity and how the literature and art of the remote past were used to create a modern, distinctive identity. The rediscovery of that inheritance led to a cultural renaissance – the Celtic Revival – that heralded the profound political and social changes which continue to shape life in Ireland to this day.

The Literature course examines the works of two major Irish Writers: the poet W. B. Yeats and the novelist James Joyce. Both writers, who had an impact of international significance, reflect in their work the tensions and creative dynamism of their time.

Yeats viewed the emergence of modern Ireland as the child of the literary imagination and how the literature and art of the remote past were used to create a modern, distinctive identity. The rediscovery of that inheritance led to a cultural renaissance – the Celtic Revival – that heralded the profound political and social changes which continue to shape life in Ireland to this day.

The Literature course examines the works of two major Irish Writers: the poet W. B. Yeats and the novelist James Joyce. Both writers, who had an impact of international significance, reflect in their work the tensions and creative dynamism of their time.

Yeats viewed the emergence of modern Ireland as the child of the literary imagination and how the literature and art of the remote past were used to create a modern, distinctive identity. The rediscovery of that inheritance led to a cultural renaissance – the Celtic Revival – that heralded the profound political and social changes which continue to shape life in Ireland to this day.

The Literature course examines the works of two major Irish Writers: the poet W. B. Yeats and the novelist James Joyce. Both writers, who had an impact of international significance, reflect in their work the tensions and creative dynamism of their time.

Yeats viewed the emergence of modern Ireland as the child of the literary imagination and how the literature and art of the remote past were used to create a modern, distinctive identity. The rediscovery of that inheritance led to a cultural renaissance – the Celtic Revival – that heralded the profound political and social changes which continue to shape life in Ireland to this day.
Summer School 2018

In 2018, University College Cork holds its thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, literature and culture. For the month of July, students explore key turning-points in Ireland’s history that shaped its destiny and identity, and examine how modern Irish writers of international significance sought to define a sense of cultural identity.

In the History section, we explore the foundations of Irish identity and the quest for political independence. We examine the earliest expressions of Irish identity and how the literature and art of the remote past were used to create a modern, distinctive identity. The rediscovery of that inheritance led to a cultural renaissance – the Celtic Revival – that heralded the profound political and social changes which continue to shape life in Ireland to this day.

The Literature course examines the works of two major Irish Writers: the poet W. B. Yeats and the novelist James Joyce. Both writers, who had an impact of international significance, reflect in their work the tensions and creative dynamism of their time. Yeats viewed the emergence of modern Ireland as the child of the literary imagination, a place “the poets imagined terrible and gay.” A contrasting voice from the time, James Joyce, gives a very different view of the period and the role of the writer in modern Ireland. We will read a wide selection of Yeats’s poetry, from his earliest work to his masterpiece, 1919’s The Second Coming.

The Summer School in Irish Studies in UCC aims to provide a unique learning experience by combining a rigorous introduction to major academic themes in Irish Studies with study tours, cultural events, and small-group discussion sessions where students interact with leading academics.

Dr Damian Bracken, Director

Welcome from the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies at University College Cork. The School attracts many students with an interest in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Dr Mary Breen, Director

Dr Damian Bracken, Director

University College Cork

Founded in 1849, University College Cork is one of Ireland’s oldest universities and has five times been named Ireland’s University of the Year in recognition of excellence in teaching and research. UCC is a dynamic learning environment with a global outlook and makes a major contribution to Ireland’s economy and cultural identity.

Located in Cork, the second city of the Republic of Ireland, University College Cork is a vibrant teaching and research institution with a diverse student body, attracting students from over 80 countries worldwide. Cork city, placed in one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial centre. Founded in early medieval times, the city grew to become a major port with a long history of connections to Europe and the Americas. Through its port the city was the major point of departure for the Irish emigrating to the New World and the point of introduction of new ideas from the outside world.

Welcome from the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies at University College Cork. The School attracts many students with an interest in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.
Study Tours

Study tours are an integral part of the Summer School programme and give students the opportunity to explore the beauty of the Irish countryside and to experience the places examined in lectures and seminars. The study tours will bring students to Fota House and Gardens in County Cork; Adare, Co. Waterford, a picturesque coastal village and the site of an impressive range of early Christian monuments; Curraghmore, one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial coastal town with a long history of connections to the outside world.

Costs

The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on study tours, but excludes daily meals. To attend the School for three weeks costs €1300 and for two weeks, €1000.

For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork.

Summer School Co-ordinator. All documentation must be received by the Summer School Co-ordinator, internationaloffice@ucc.ie by Friday, 9 March 2018.

The Scholarship

A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Welcoming the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, literature and culture. For the month of July, students explore key turning-points in Ireland’s history that shaped its destiny and identity, and examine how modern Irish writers of international significance sought to define a sense of cultural identity.

These themes are explored in lectures, seminars, and in a series of field trips, delivered with their work. Assistants develop the themes of the lectures. These Assistants also give students guidance and encouragement in their studies, but excludes daily meals.

The School welcomes students who take the course for credit and those who choose not to enrole for credit. Students who wish to take the course for credit and wish to be added to the student list for the School’s official transcripts must indicate this clearly on the enrolment form. A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

The School welcomes students who take the course for credit and those who choose not to enrole for credit. Students who wish to take the course for credit and wish to be added to the student list for the School’s official transcripts must indicate this clearly on the enrolment form. A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Study Tours

Study tours are an integral part of the Summer School programme and give students the opportunity to explore the beauty of the Irish countryside and to experience the places examined in lectures and seminars. The study tours will bring students to Fota House and Gardens in County Cork; Adare, Co. Waterford, a picturesque coastal village and the site of an impressive range of early Christian monuments; Curraghmore, one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial coastal town with a long history of connections to the outside world.

Costs

The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on study tours, but excludes daily meals. To attend the School for three weeks costs €1300 and for two weeks, €1000.

For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork.

Summer School Co-ordinator. All documentation must be received by the Summer School Co-ordinator, internationaloffice@ucc.ie by Friday, 9 March 2018.

The Scholarship

A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Welcoming the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, literature and culture. For the month of July, students explore key turning-points in Ireland’s history that shaped its destiny and identity, and examine how modern Irish writers of international significance sought to define a sense of cultural identity.

These themes are explored in lectures, seminars, and in a series of field trips, delivered with their work. Assistants develop the themes of the lectures. These Assistants also give students guidance and encouragement in their studies, but excludes daily meals.

The School welcomes students who take the course for credit and those who choose not to enrole for credit. Students who wish to take the course for credit and wish to be added to the student list for the School’s official transcripts must indicate this clearly on the enrolment form. A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Study Tours

Study tours are an integral part of the Summer School programme and give students the opportunity to explore the beauty of the Irish countryside and to experience the places examined in lectures and seminars. The study tours will bring students to Fota House and Gardens in County Cork; Adare, Co. Waterford, a picturesque coastal village and the site of an impressive range of early Christian monuments; Curraghmore, one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial coastal town with a long history of connections to the outside world.

Costs

The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on study tours, but excludes daily meals. To attend the School for three weeks costs €1300 and for two weeks, €1000.

For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork.

Summer School Co-ordinator. All documentation must be received by the Summer School Co-ordinator, internationaloffice@ucc.ie by Friday, 9 March 2018.

The Scholarship

A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Welcoming the Directors

As Directors we welcome you to the thirty-ninth International Summer School in Irish Studies, introducing students from across the world to Irish history, literature and culture. For the month of July, students explore key turning-points in Ireland’s history that shaped its destiny and identity, and examine how modern Irish writers of international significance sought to define a sense of cultural identity.

These themes are explored in lectures, seminars, and in a series of field trips, delivered with their work. Assistants develop the themes of the lectures. These Assistants also give students guidance and encouragement in their studies, but excludes daily meals.

The School welcomes students who take the course for credit and those who choose not to enrole for credit. Students who wish to take the course for credit and wish to be added to the student list for the School’s official transcripts must indicate this clearly on the enrolment form. A letter of application demonstrating their research interests in Irish studies providing them with an ideal location in which to explore the varied aspects of Irish history, literature and culture. It offers expert tuition, optional courses in Irish language and a varied social programme.

Study Tours

Study tours are an integral part of the Summer School programme and give students the opportunity to explore the beauty of the Irish countryside and to experience the places examined in lectures and seminars. The study tours will bring students to Fota House and Gardens in County Cork; Adare, Co. Waterford, a picturesque coastal village and the site of an impressive range of early Christian monuments; Curraghmore, one of the most scenic regions of Ireland, is a thriving commercial coastal town with a long history of connections to the outside world.

Costs

The cost of attending the School for citizens of the European Union is €1500 which covers single-room accommodation from Sunday 1 July to Saturday 28 July, tuition, certain social events, study tours, and meals on study tours, but excludes daily meals. To attend the School for three weeks costs €1300 and for two weeks, €1000.

For further information: Ms Marie Riordan, International Office, University College Cork.

Summer School Co-ordinator. All documentation must be received by the Summer School Co-ordinator, internationaloffice@ucc.ie by Friday, 9 March 2018.