The French painter Jean Auguste Dominique Ingres (1780-1867), both successful and controversial in his own time, has been a major influence on artists since then. He was also an accomplished violinist and referred to music as the 'art that warms up my life'. The passion Ingres had for the violin is referenced in the French expression Violon d'Ingres used for an avocation carried out with talent and dedication by someone with another primary métier. This is the vision of an exhibition which showcases the creativity of professionals whose métier is in medicine.

The Jennings Gallery is on the first floor of the old Brookfield House at the centre of the Brookfield complex, the entrance to which is on College Road opposite St Francis' Avenue
