Course Attended: Analysing Qualitative Interviews, Location: University of Oxford, 5th-6th February 2015

Thanks to receiving a travel bursary from the College of Medicine & Health I had the opportunity to attend the course 'Analysing Qualitative Interviews' at University of Oxford.

The major benefit from my attendance at this course was the opportunity to gain practical experience in the various approaches to qualitative data analysis. I now feel more competent and equipped to tackle my own analysis for my doctoral research. Additionally, attending this course provided me with the opportunity to network with other students who were at various stages of their qualitative research.
