Conference Attended:

The 18th European Doctoral Conference in Nursing Science, 19 – 21 September 2019 Graz, Austria.

This participation provided me a unique opportunity in discussing part of my PhD, which was focusing on nurses' practices regarding venous thromboembolism prevention.

My attendance also allows a chance to answer questions from the conference attendees and to receive valuable feedback from professors who are interested in this area. In the conference, I got the opportunity to network with many notable professors, nurses and PhD students.

I also got the opportunity to attend panel discussions and workshops run by key nursing professors from different universities in Europe.

The abstract printed in the book of the conference and counts as a scientific publication.

Overall, attending the conference improved my presentation skills and my ability to discuss my research with other researchers. It also was an excellent opportunity to link with nursing researchers from various backgrounds.
