Conferences Attended:

European Implementation Event 2023, 8th-9th June 2023.

The European Implementation Event was an in-person conference on implementation science and the topics covered over the two days were relevant to my area of PhD research. Implementation science is the guiding methodology for my PhD and by attending the conference I was introduced new methods which has helped inform the next stage of my PhD. Many of the talks covered aspects such as considering equity with implementation science and policy implementation which is very relevant to my area of research. Having the opportunity to attend this conference was a valuable addition to my professional and academic development as an early career researcher. It was also an excellent networking opportunity having the opportunity to meet researchers from other countries as well as Ireland who are conducting research similar to mine.
