World Anti-Bullying Forum, Dublin City University,
June 4th – 6th 2019.

My PhD Research is focused on understanding young people's perspectives on cyberbullying with a view to informing the development of prevention and intervention strategies. The travel bursary afforded me the opportunity to give two oral presentations on my research at the World Anti-Bullying Forum, a highly relevant international conference. My presentations were entitled "Young people's perceptions of the nature of cyberbullying: A meta-ethnography" and "Communication is the Root Issue": Informing the Development of Cyberbullying Interventions". It was a very useful exercise to present and answer questions from conference attendees in advance of my upcoming Viva. Over the course of the conference I networked with world-renowned researchers in the field of bullying. It was inspiring to learn about the shape of current and future cyberbullying research as I begin to look for opportunities to work in this key area of public health research. Many thanks.
