

Dr. Caitríona Ní Laoire is a Lecturer in Applied Social Studies. She was a contract researcher for many years, and one of her research interests is equality in academic labour markets, including the casualisation of the academic labour force. She has a particular interest in gender equality in research and academia – she was Principal Investigator of the Through the Glass Ceiling project in UCC (2010-2012) and is currently Scientific Coordinator of the GENOVATE project at UCC, which aims to address gender inequalities in research and innovation.
