

College of Arts, Celtic Studies and Social Sciences

Unit 8:

The Treaty and the Irish Civil War December 1921-May 1923

> Transition Year Project Book Part II

Contents

Lesson 4

| Phase 2: The Battle for Munster, July-August 1922 | 3 |
|---|-----------|
| Documents and Maps | 4 |
| Comprehension Questions | 8 |
| Reporting the Civil War Newspaper Template | 10 |

Lesson 5

The Death of Michael Collins, 22 August 1922

| Documents and Maps | 11 |
|--|-----------|
| Comprehension Questions and Writing task | 14 |

Lesson 6

| Phase 3: Guerrilla Warfare, Sept 1922-May 1923 | 15 |
|--|-----------|
| Document and Maps | 16 |
| Comprehension Questions | 24 |
| Task 6: Pros and Cons | 26 |

LAS OF THE

PHASE 2: JULY-AUGUST 1922 - THE BATTLE FOR MUNSTER

IRA units evacuated Dublin in early July 1922 and republicans were able to consolidate their control of Munster and the west. Isolated pro-Treaty units in Listowel and Sligo were quickly overwhelmed and the Anti-Treaty IRA (ATIRA) held a defensive line across Munster, anchored by the cities of Limerick in the west and Waterford in the east. The ATIRA Republican forces were comprised of numerous brigade and battalion columns, usually numbering between twenty-five and fifty fighters, forming a loosely organized IRA 'field army'. It faced rapidly-growing NA forces that were well-armed with artillery and armoured vehicles.

THE FALL OF LIMERICK AND WATERFORD CITIES

The NA won a critical victory during the ten-day Battle of Limerick, which ended on 21 July. On the same day they captured Waterford city. Over the next two weeks, the NA methodically pushed the republicans back in Tipperary, Limerick, and Waterford, capturing Carrick-on-Suir and Clonmel in the process. The most intense fighting occurred during the two-week Battle of Kilmallock, which extended into the nearby villages of Bruff and Bruree during which Free State forces under the command of Eoin O'Duffy placed the ATIRA under intense pressure.

National Army soldiers and barefoot children in Bruff, County Limerick, following the taking of the town from the anti-Treaty IRA in early August 1922

SEA LANDINGS

The republican positions finally broke after the NA conducted surprise sea landings in Kerry and Cork in early August. The ATIRA had anticipated such an assault, but the flimsy republican defences were no match for determined NA troops. Government forces arriving at Fenit, County Kerry captured Tralee after a brief but difficult fight on 2 August. A more ambitious assault occurred on 8 August, when Emmet Dalton organized three simultaneous landings of Free State troops at Youghal, Union Hall, and Passage West in County Cork. The NA easily defeated republican forces at Youghal and Union Hall but faced much more determined resistance while trying to seize Cork city. During the three-day 'Battle of Douglas' on the city's outskirts, hundreds of troops faced each other, though once again Free State artillery and armoured cars proved decisive and the republicans evacuated Cork.

The Limerick/Waterford line collapsed completely, as many of its front line units moved back to engage with the NA's amphibious offensive behind them. While Emmet Dalton's forces aggressively pushed inland across County Cork, Eoin O'Duffy's forces around Kilmallock moved south. The Free State won a decisive victory but failed to destroy republican resistance. When Lynch ordered his forces to resume guerrilla tactics in mid-August, he was able to mobilize enough seasoned IRA fighters to make much of the province ungovernable. One of the republicans' first querrilla successes had immense political ramifications. When the ATIRA ambushed and killed the Free State Commander-in-Chief Michael Collins' at Béal na Blá on 22 August both sides understood that though the Battle of Munster was over, it had been replaced by a querrilla war.

-Document M-Edited Extracts from an tÓglách, 22 July 1922

The National Army continued to publish the pre-split IRA news sheet. This edition gives an account of National Army military successes and advances after the Battle of Dublin, and challenges reports by republican news sheet, Poblacht na hÉireann in early July 1922.

[Vol. IV No. 7] (New Series)

JULY 22, 1922

[PRICE: TWOPENCE]

FICTION AND FACT

During the early days of the fighting in Dublin it was sought to strengthen the morale of the Irregulars by the daily publication of Irregular "victories" and "advances" in the Provinces. Since the re-establishment of communications with many parts of the country, and the unrestricted circulation of newspapers in Dublin, there has been a decided fallling off in the circulation of this type of "news."

A brief review of the war reports circulated by the Irregulars early in the present month and the military situation in the country as it exists to-day, provides an interesting and instructive contrast.

July 2: The Irregulars' News Sheet (No. 6) reported that "the forces operating in Dublin have been reinforced with both men and material. For military reasons no further information can be given on this subject at the present time."

On the same date (July 2nd) the Irregulars' News Sheet announced to all and sundry that the troops in Galway were appealing for reinforcements to G.H.Q.,"as they are being strongly pressed by our troops (the Irregulars) and cannot hold out much longer. The West's awake!"

Under date July 8rd (No. 7) the Irregular News Sheet says: "The Republican plan of campaign is developing exactly as intended. The defence of the Four Courts enabled all the manoeuvres to be carried out whilst the whole of the Free State Army was concentrated upon the attack."

In one of the early "News" sheets published by the Irregulars, it was announced the post occupied by troops in Listowel had been captured, and that the troops had thrown in their lot with the Irregulars. This mythical "victory" was too good to be lost sight of, and accordingly, on July 14th, the Irregular propagandists again declared that "the capture of Listowel was followed by a union of the two forces." The facts are the Irregulars were not reinforced by either men or material in Dublin. All posts held in the city were surrendered or evacuated, many of the Irregulars retreating to the country.

After seventeen days have elapsed the troops are still holding out in Galway. In fact, they have occupied Renmore Barracks in Galway city, and other posts in the county from which the Irregulars have retreated. The ways of Irregular propagandists are strange.

The plan of campaign has developed exactly to the extent that the Irregulars now hold no posts in Dublin city or county, and that the [National] Army controls the entire Eastern and Midland Counties. At the moment the troops are operating successfully against the Irregular strongholds in the extreme South and West.

Capt. O'Grady, one of the officers stationed in Listowel ... has reported the facts of this case ... The barrack was attacked by a strong force of Irregulars drawn from a wide area. For four hours the garrison held out ... There was no "union" with the Irregulars after the surrender. The truth is Capt. O'Grady, with more than 100 of his men are now serving with the Army in Limerick ... So much for the Listowel fable.

The Big Advance

The initial successes of the Army in Dublin have been followed during the past ten days by many important achievements in the Provinces. In some instances, whole counties like Wexford and Louth have been cleared of Irregulars during one week.

On the eastern sea-board the Army has established complete control. Louth, Meath, Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford being strongly held. A remarkable feature of the campaign in this area, has been the small resistance offered by Irregulars in centres such as Gorey, Enniscorthy, and Baltinglass ... Those who have [boasted] most of dying for Ireland during the past few months have found it much more convenient to fly a White Flag for Ireland ...

In the Midlands.

The situation in the Midlands is entirely reassuring. Here, as in the Eastern areas, those Irregulars who were not captured have found it more gallant to retreat southwards and westwards than attempt to withstand the advance of the troops. All the Midland counties, including Meath, Westmeath, Kildare, Longford, Leix and Offally are controlled by the Army. Birr and Tullamore are isolated posts held by the Irregulars in Offally, but at the time of writing it is reported that Birr is being evacuated.

In all the areas in which the Army is in control peace and security to life and property, have been restored. Everywhere they have entered the Troops have been extended a warm welcome by the people. In word and in deed the troops have shown that they are the protectors, not the suppressors, of the people's rights and liberties.

The South and West.

In the extreme south and west large tracts of country are still held by Irregulars who have been strengthened by those who retreated from Dublin, the Midlands and Eastern counties. This area comprises the counties of Cork, Kerry, and Waterford, a large portion of Mayo, Tipperary, Limerick and portions of Galway and Sligo ... From the Midlands, the Eastern Counties, Galway and Clare the Troops are now operating against the Irregulars in the south and West.

- Document N-Typescript copy of a letter written by Harry Boland on 13 July 1922 to "Sally", a recipient in the USA

Photograph of Harry Boland and Michael Collins, surrounded by members of the Dublin hurling team at the Leinster Hurling Final in Croke Park, on 11 September 1921 during the Truce period.

[Photo: National library of Ireland, BEA44]

Dear Sally:

Somewhere in Ireland, July 13, 1922.

I have your very nice wee note and hasten to assure you that I am tip top, having spent the last few weeks on Commands in the Dublin Mountains.

England has again waged war upon us, this time she has employed Irish men to do her dirty work, and I regret to say that this latest phase of Ireland's struggle is bound to be more terrible than anything that has yet occurred in the history of this most wonderful and unfortunate land.

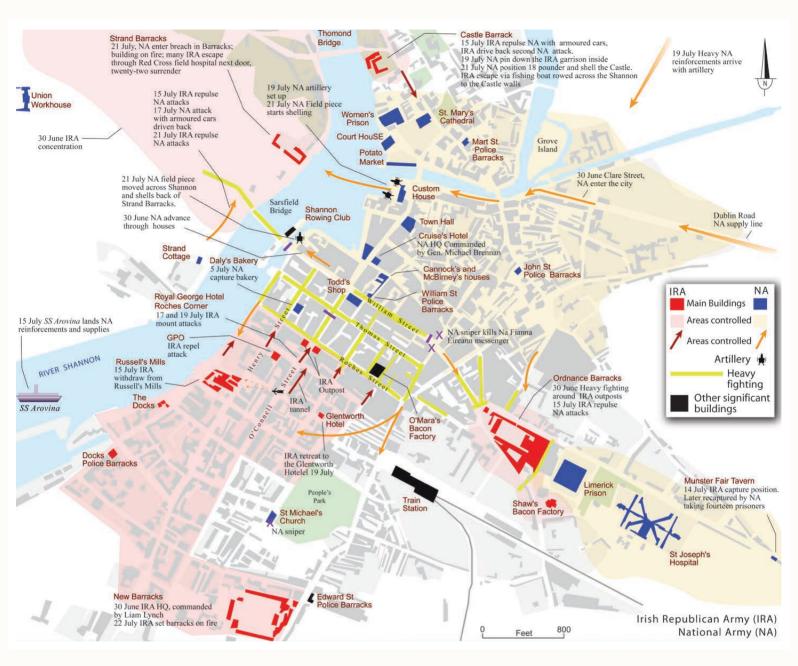

Read Ireland's history and you will find that in all time since England first polluted our shores, that there has been 'The King's Irish' and the 'Irish'. We have the same today. Lloyd George has bought half of those who made the fight for the past six years, men who would drag Ireland into the Empire and who now make war on the Republic at the bidding of the British Prime Minister, with British guns, armoured cars, artillery etc. - the black and tans have given way to the Green and Tans. Hammar Greenwood is outdone by Mick Collins ...

This fight has been forced upon us - we must bear it. I am in it with a heavy heart, but yet not without hope. The world will yet honour Ireland for ther devotion to freedom, even tho 'This' be left a smouldering heap of ruins, the world shall known that here is one land which prefered death to dishonor. Ireland is not, never was and never will be a part of the British Empire, we shall keep faith with the Dead and shall not betray our trust. Pray for us and for Ireland and tell all friends that our course is the same as when Dev was with ye, I remain ever yours,

Harry

- Document O -

Map showing the events during the ten-day Battle of Limerick, which ended on 21 July 1922

Caption: At the outbreak of the Civil War in late June 1922, Michael Brennan and Donnchadh O'Hannigan, commanders of the National Army (NA) in Limerick, had a combined force of just 400 soldiers in the city, armed with fewer that 150 rifles. They were heavily outnumbered and out gunned by a much larger anti-Treaty IRA force of 700 well-armed republicans from Cork, Kerry and west Limerick ,who were led by IRA Chief of Staff, Liam Lynch. A peace agreement between the two rival military forces in the city held until 11 July, by which the time the arrival of reinforcements from Dublin, Galway and the midlands strengthened the NA's position significantly. The first nine days of the Battle of Limerick involved intense street fighting that resulted in a stalemate, neither side inflicting any serious casualties or winning strategic territory from the other. The arrival of heavy artillery on the night of 20 July swung the battle in favour of the NA, which was able, within a matter of hours to force the anti-treaty IRA garrison holding the Strand Military Barracks to surrender. Lacking any artillery of their own, the republicans were not in a position to defend their three other military barracks in the city, and on the evening of 21 July they burnt their outposts and retreated south and west toward Kilmallock, Bruree and Adare, leaving the NA in full control of the city. At least six members of the anti-Treaty forces (five anti-Treaty IRA and one Fianna Éireann scout), six members of the NA, and eleven civilians were killed during the fighting in Limerick city.

[Source Padraig Og O Ruairc, The Battle for Limerick City, (Cork 2010)]

LINK TO PATHE FILM RELATING TO THE BATTLE OF LIMERICK

THE BATTLE FOR MUNSTER, JULY-AUGUST 1922

After its defeat in Dublin, the anti-Treaty IRA fell back south of a defensive line stretching from Limerick to Waterford - the so-called 'Munster Republic'. A successful recruiting campaign swelled the ranks of National Army (NA), which took the strategically important cities of Limerick and Waterford on 21 July 1922. The NA then pressed south into the Munster Republic. Republican positions broke after the NA conducted surprise sea landings in Kerry and Cork in early August 1922 and by the end of the month, all the major towns in Munster were in Free State hands, ending the conventional phase of the Civil War.

Republican prisoners in Cork City, following the National Army capture of the city on 10 August 1922

Many of the republicans pictured here were captured during the NA's surprise landing at Passage in the early hours of 8 August 1922.

Near the front of the column, two republicans wear their flat caps backwards, which denoted active service in the IRA. The NA force that captured Cork brought hundreds of extra rifles with them, and immediately began to enrol local volunteers into its ranks, including numerous former British soldiers.

Atlax of the Trish Revolution Resources for Schools

COMPREHENSION & CRITICISM QUESTIONS

JULY-AUGUST 1922

1. What 2 claims made by republicans in issue No. 6 of their news-sheet does An tÓglách contradict? (Doc M)

2. According to An tÓglách, what is the last post still held by republicans in the midlands? (Doc M)

3. How does An tÓglách prove that popular opinion is in favour of the Free State troops? (Doc M)

4. What are the strengths and weaknesses of the National Army newsletter, An tÓglách as a historical source?

Strengths -----Weaknesses -----

5. What does Document N reveal about Harry Boland's opinion of (a) the British government (b) the pro-Treay side?

6. Based on the map of the Battle for Munster, what were the name sof the National Army ships that landed (a) at Tralee (b) at Youghal (c) Union Hall in August 1922? (Doc P)

- 8. To what town did the Tralee republicans retreat? (Doc P)
- 9. Can you find any evidence in the map to suggest that the republicans in Cork city strongly resisted the advancing Free State troops? (Doc P)

10. Based on your understanding of Document P, do you consider the National Army's sea-landings to have been a successful tactic? Explain your answer.

Your Task

- Step 1: Your teacher will divide the class into pairs.
- Step 2: Using the information in maps O and P and their captions, as well as your own research, plan two front page articles for the pro-Free State Freeman's Journal.

Article 1: An Account of the Battle for Limerick Article 2: The Results of the Free State sea landings in August

Both articles should include references to specific places Remember to use headlines that reveal the perspective of the newspaper

Step 3: Label the map on the newspaper template to illustrate the information mentioned in your two articles

PRESS

SPECTACLES AND EYEGLASSES COMBINING ALL THE LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

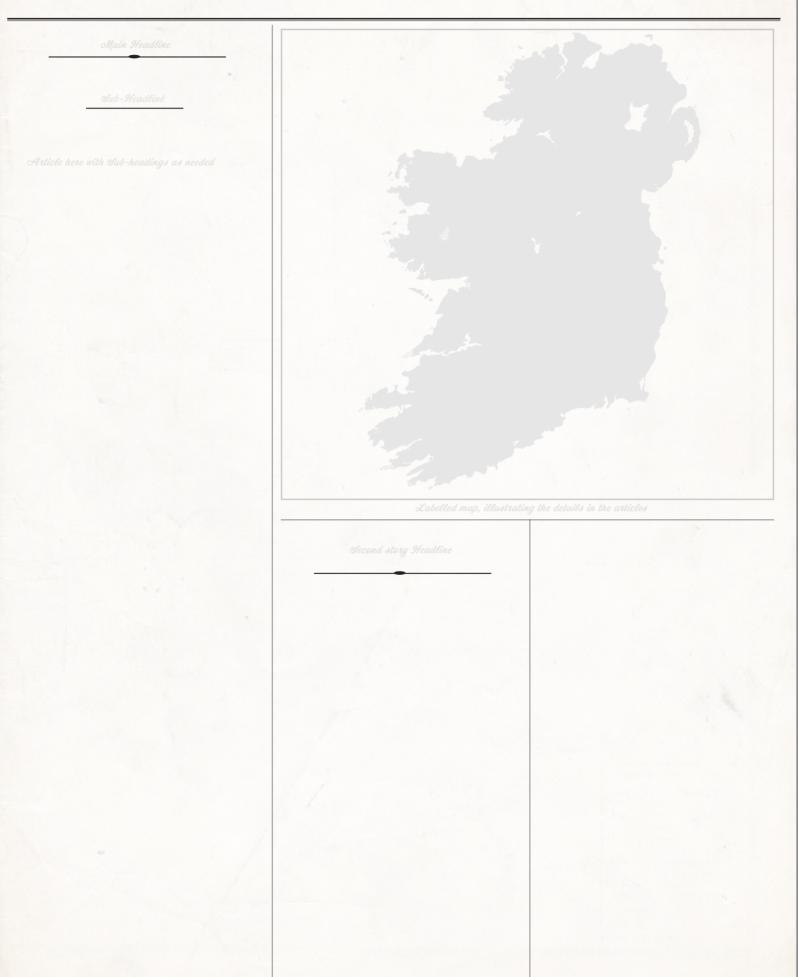

W. K. Cahill, Optician, Las of P. Com 46 Dawson Street, Dubli

The Freeman's Iournal IRELAND'S NATIONAL NEWSPAPER

DUBLIN: FRIDAY, JULY 22ND, 1922

OUR TEA the pick of the market unverying to quality anerying to quality and give universal astalactics. 3/4. 2/8. 2/4. 2/1. 3 2/10. (ESTD 68. BECKER Bros S SOUTH GT SORGE'S P.

ESTD. 763.]

Letter from Michael Collins to Kitty Kiernan on 10 April 1922

10th April 1922

My Dearest Kitty,

period

No letter again today - I got back from Wexford last night but it was only this morning I got your wire. There was a very good meeting in Wexford and a very good reception all along both going and coming. No interruption at all at the meeting. What has happened to you though

What has happened to your seriously not to have written for three days. I suppose you've been enjoying yourself too well or something - staying up at night and in bed at day. Is that it?

in bed at day. Is that as How did the hunt so on? Honestly, I do think its a shame you haven't written - but then I may be hard on you. There may be a real reason and if I said anything but then I don't say anything that I have to regret afterwards. Things are rapidly becoming as hard as they can be and the country has before it -2-but then what may be the worst period yet. A few madmen may do anything. Indeed they are just setting on the pressure gradually - they so on from cutting a tree to cutting a railway line, then to firing at a barrack, then to firing at a lorry, and so on. But God knows I do not want to be worrying you with these

I'm most awfully anxious to see you quickly and this week is soing to be a bad week with me by the look of things. Any improvement in the Connemara plans yet? Kitty do please hurry with making that definite, but I am anxious about you. I wonder if you're writing even today - Yes? No?

laws

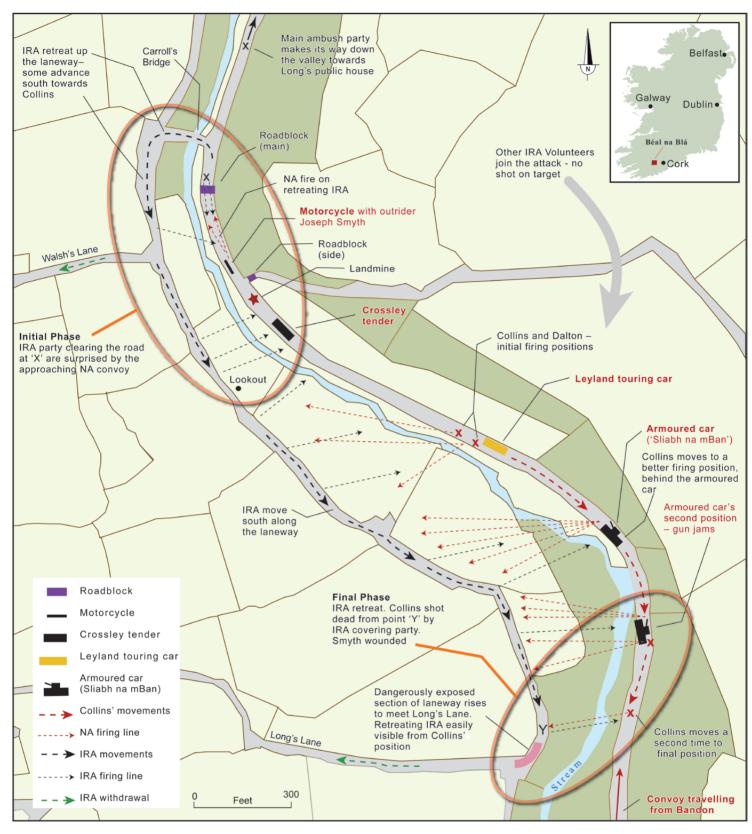

May God Bless you fondest Love Mīceāl

madme

[Source: National Library of Ireland, MS 49,618]

Michael Collins and Richard Mulcahy attending Arthur Griffith's funeral on 16 August 1922

Document R: Map of events at Béal na Blá on 22 August 1922

Caption: Michael Collins' convoy consisted of a motorcycle outrider; a Crossley Tender with eight riflemen and two machine gunners; an open-top Leyland touring car with Collins and Emmet Dalton seated in the back; and the armoured car 'Sliabh na mBan' with six occupants, including a machine-gunner. (1) While an ambush was planned in advance, it had been effectively called off and what Collins and his men encountered was a small group of Anti-Treaty IRA (ATIRA) sent to clear the road after the ambush party had left. (2) Concerned for the safety of the ambush party making their way north down the valley towards Long's public house, the remaining lookout fired warning shots. After the initial engagement a number of the Volunteers ran south along the track (marked red on map). They were knowingly moving towards Collins and the armoured car, the vehicle sequence having been noted that morning. (3) Hearing the shots, Collins chose to stop and fight against Dalton's advice. (4) The ATIRA continued to move along the track towards Collins, but were pinned down by machine-gun fire from the armoured car. The machine gun then jammed, which provided the ATIRA with an opportunity to escape, using the approach to Long's Lane. Collins moved to the back of the armoured car and then further south to get a better firing position and stood in the middle of the road, presumably believing the attackers were making their escape up the laneway. (5) The ATIRA, knowing how exposed they were, covered the retreat and it was this action that resulted in the killing of Collins. Smyth, the outrider, having made his way down the full length of the ambush site to attend Collins, was shot in the neck.

-Document S -

EVENING HERALD

VOL 31. No 199

DUBLIN, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1922

PRICE: 11/2

IRISH ARMY CHIEF KILLED IN CO. CORK AMBUSH

TO THE NATION

Irish Government on Loss of Chief

"WHEN VICTORY SMILES"

The bravest of our countrymen has been snatched from us at the moment when victory smiled through the clouds upon the uprising of the Nation to which he had dedicated all the powers of his magnificent manhood.

The genius and courage of Michael Collins lent a force and an inspiration to the race which brought the long fight against the external enemy to the triumphant end which had become almost a dream, and swept before it the domestic revolt which tried to pluck from your hands the fruits of that triumph - your unchallenged authority in the land.

In every phase of the awakened activity of the Nation constructive, administrative, executive, military - the personality of Michael Collins was vivid and impelling.

He has been slain to our unuterable grief and loss, but he cannot die. He will live in the rule of the people, which he gave his great best to assert and confirm, and which his colleagues undertake is a solemn charge to maintain

.....

MANY TRIBUTES

Fearless Soldier and a Great Leader

Mr. Lloyd George has sent the following message to Mr W.T. Cosgrave, Acting Chairman of the Government :-

"Deeply regret to hear of the death of the Commander-in-Chief of the Free State Army. In his death the Free State has lost a fearless soldier, a leader of great energy and devotion, and a man of remarkable personal charm. Please convey to the members of your Government, my profound sympathy with them in their loss of one of Ireland's brilliant sons at a moment when Ireland most needed his special qualities of courage and resolution."

General Sir Neville Macready writes from British Headquarters, Parkgate, to the acting chairman of the Government :-

"I would ask you to accept my sincere sympathy on the heavy loss that has fallen upon yourself, the Provisional Government and the Irish Nation on the death of General Michael Collins. On many occasions during the last year when we met on official business, I always found him ever ready and willing to help in all matters that were brought to his notice in connection with the troops under my command, and I deeply regret that he was not spared to see in a prosperous and peaceful Ireland the accomplishment of his work."

LIMERICK SCENES

Crowd Dazed by Tragic Announcement

(By Our Special Representative) Limerick, Wednesday. The people of Limerick were this morning shocked by the news of the death of General Michael Collins, which was announced in a brief notice posted outside the Post Office. The crowd that gathered around seemed dazed, and many ... refused to believe that the gallant Commander-in-Chief whom they had cheered but 3 days ago as he passed through their streets, was now dead. They found it difficult to realise, and sally and silently each small group departed, as another took its place. The tragic news spread quickly, and cast a dark gloom over the city.

I last saw General Collins at Field G.H.Q., South-Western Command, on Sunday evening, as he was setting out on a tour of the command area in company with General O'Duffy and Comdt. General Finian Lynch. With a number of other journalists, I was admiring the high-powered special Leyland car in which he travelled, when General Collins came striding out of headquarters. The guard presented arms, and he returned the salute, then after his customary fashion he glanced quickly about him, his keen eye noting everybody that was gathered there. As he stood chatting with his fellow officers I took the opportunity to snap him with a small hand camera I had.

While I was focusing it he saw the movement, and turning with a smile he kindly paused a moment while I clicked the shutter, and though I have no proof of the fact, I believe that I was the last to photoeraph the dead Chief. MICHAEL COLLINS DEAD

End of Short but Brilliant Career Devoted to Ireland's Cause

SHOT IN CO. CORK AMBUSH

Second Disastrous Blow to the Irish People Within a Few Days

The appalling news of the death of General Michael Collins has sent a thrill of horror through the nation this morning. He was, according to a brief message from Cork this morning, shot- dead in an ambush near Bandon in the county where he was born thirty years ago. This is the second terrible tragedy that has befallen the country within a Inits is the second terriple tragedy that has beraulen the country within a space of ten days, the first being the untimely end of President Griffith. During the week-end General Collins had two escapes from death, one being a deadly attack on his motor car near Stillorgan, Co. Dublin, when fortunately he was a deady actack of institutor car near school gail, co. Jubility, when for unately ne was not in the car; and the other being a collision between bis car and another at Dun Laoghaire, when he escaped unhurt.

DETAILS OF THE APPALLING OCCURRENCE

(By Our Special Representative) Cork, Wednesday.

Cork to-day is a city of the dead. Despite the summer sun there is a deep gloom over everything, for the terrible news of the death of General Michael Collins, Commander-in-Chief of the National Army, has shocked the people beyond imagination. The details of the awful occurrence are only meagre as yet. Those who were present at the last scene are so overwrought as to be unable to give anything like a coherent account of the incidents that culminated in this national tragedy. From the particulars available it would scenn that General Collins, who was accompanied by Major-General Dalton O.C. of the troops, Cork; Comdt, Dolan Military Governor of Mountjoy; and Staff-Capt. Conroy, were proceeding from Bandon. They had reached a place called Bealnablath, a little village midway between Macroom and Bandon.

General Collins and party were travelling in an open touring car, and were accompanied by a guard. They passed through the village and having gone 300 or 400 yards, ran into an ambush.

It was about 6.30 o'clock yesterday evening, and a large party of irregulars had taken advantage of the hilly and woody nature of the country. Without waning a volley of shots rang out. Nobody was hit. The party immediately took cover, and replied to the fire. Heavy exchanges took place for about half an hour and just at the moment when it was thought the attackers had been beaten off, General Collins, who had fought all the time, fell mortally wounded. He was hit by a bullet in the head at the back of the ear. He only survived a short time ...

General Dalton was also slightly wounded. One of the drivers was also hit and a motor cyclist who accompanied the party wounded in the neck. His condition is critical. Shortly afterwards the ambushers made off. The body of Michael Collins was subsequently removed to Cork and afterwards to Shanakiel Hospital where it now lies.

There was a painful sensation in the city when the sad news was announced. There is not a single shop open in Cork to-day. Flags on public buildings are at half-mast. Thousands of people are in the streets discussing the grim event. Everybody is pained and shocked, and stunned. It is, indeed, a city of death of gloom.

DUBLIN DAZED

Citizens Striken with Great Grief

THEIR IDOL GONE

When the news of the death of General Collins became known in Dublin today it was read with feelings of horror and despair. At first the mind reeled, stunned at the dreadful import of this second appalling national tragedy in the short space of ten days. People were incapable of coherent thought. Then, as the dread realisation that this incomparable tragedy had indeed taken place sank in, the first numb feelings slowly died, and gave place to voluble expressions of grief and indignation. Ireland's irreparable loss became the one topic of discussion, and numerous aspects of the great chief's many-sided character were recalled.

THE ELUSIVE CHIEF.

Many spoke of the dashing, romantic figure of the "elusive Michael Collins" which loomed such a glorious symbol of unconquerable audacity and ingenuity of Young Ireland through the gloom and horror of the terror - of that Michael Collins, whose career is like to be the ideal and inspiration of Irish boys in generations to come.

Others, the older and more thoughtful spoke of the great statesman that had passed, the man with the blazing dreams of the idealist combined with the masterful, forceful personality, boundless energy, and shrewd practical common sense to carry them through.

In talking to the people in the street and seeing how the news reacted on so many diverse personalities, one comprehended, possibly more fully than ever, the completeness of the great leader's character, and now fitting this man was to be the leader of the race, in whom every type ... of the nation, might find some aspect of character attuned and responding to their own mentality ... The thinker and the man of action, the idealist and the man of affairs, each found in his complex personality the note that vibrated to his own mentality.

PATHETIC RECOLLECTIONS

With sad pity and pride people recalled his daring and his reckeless contempt for death that was an outstanding characteristic of his. "Cowards die many times before their deaths, the brave man faces death but once" were apt words when applied to him.

Many also spoke of the honour and affection felt for him by the people of Dublin, of the faces that glowed as they watched him march in the funeral procession of the late President [Griffith], and recalled how, in spite of the solemnity and sorrow of the occasion, so great was his popularity that when scenes from the funeral procession of Mr Griffith were thrown on the screen the audience were unable to restrain their applause when General Collins appeared at the head of his Staff.

Those who knew and loved him spoke of his gaiety and of the great personal charm of his character; they recalled the delightful companion, the life and soul of every gathering of intimate friends. One colleague of his in the Dail said, "Through all his troubles and worries he had the laugh of a boy."

DEAD GENERAL'S LIFE

| 1892 - | Born near Clonakilty, Co. Cork. |
|--------|---|
| 1908 - | Entered postal service in London, eventually attaining a responsible position in the Guaranty Trust Company. |
| 1915 - | Returned to Dublin, a refugee from conscription, work- ing for a while in an accountant's office. |
| 1916 - | Fought in the Insurrection, and was deported to Stafford |
| - | Jail, and removed subsequently to Frongoch. He was re- |
| | leased in the general amnesty at Christmas. |
| 1917 - | Secretary to the National Aid Association and member |
| | of Sinn Fein and Army Executives, finding himself |
| | eventually in Sligo Jail on a charge of seditious speech. |
| 1918 - | Released on bail from prison, and appointed Adjutant- |
| | General and Director of Organisation. Took active |
| | part in fighting conscription. |
| 1919 - | Effected escape of de Valera from Lincoln and Barton |
| | from Mountjoy. Minister of Finance in the Dail, launch- |
| | ing loans in Ireland, Gt. Britain, and America. Hunted |
| | night, noon, and morning by the British. |
| 1920 - | Acting President of the Republic during de Valera's |
| | visit to U.S.A. and Griffith's imprisonment. Still hunted. |
| 1921 - | The Truce (July 11). Griffith's chief colleague among |
| | the Plenipotentiaries. The Treaty (December 6). |
| 1922 - | Chairman of the Provisional Government. |
| | |

COMPREHENSION & CRITICISM QUESTIONS

THE DEATH OF MICHAEL COLLINS

1. What is your impression of Michael Collins' personality based on his letter to Kitty Kiernan? (Doc Q) 2. What insight does the letter provide into the tactics of the anti-Treaty IRA? (Doc Q) 3. What are the strengths and weaknesses of a personal letter such as Document Q as a historical source? Strengths -----Weaknesses -----4. What three aspects of Michel Collins' character does Lloyd George praise in Document S? 5. According to Document S what 'terrible tragedy' occurred in Ireland only ten days before Collins' death? 6. What evidence does the Evening Herald provide of the atmosphere of mourning in Cork city? 7. Based on your reading of Document R, what three adjectives would best describe the public reaction to Michael Collins' death?

YOUR TASK

- Step 1: Your teacher will divide the class into groups of three
- Step 2: Using the information in the map (Doc R), the Evening Herald and your own research, write (or record) a news report to be delivered on the Six One News giving details of the ambush and its aftermath

Remember to be objective in your reporting

PHASE 3: AUGUST 1922- MAY 1923

The Irish Free State came into official existence on 6 December 1922, the first anniversary of the signing of the Treaty. By that stage the Free State had won the conventional phase of the civil war and was undergoing a prolonged anti-Treaty IRA campaign of guerrilla warfare and economic sabotage.

Perhaps nowhere in Ireland was the Civil War fought as bitterly as in County Kerry. While the Kerry IRA had been reasonably active during the War of Independence, it waged an aggressive guerrilla war in 1922-1923. Frustrated by their inability to crush the determined armed resistance of the Kerry republicans, National Army officers took extreme measures against the IRA.

The Free State forces in Kerry included the 'Dublin Guard', comprised of IRA veterans from Dublin including the intelligence officer David Neligan and Major-General Paddy O'Daly, the commander of Free State forces in Kerry. Republicans accused both men of killing and brutalizing republican prisoners. The toxic environment culminated in several unofficial reprisal executions carried out by the National Army in March 1923, including the notorious 'Ballyseedy Massacre'.

On 30 November 1922 IRA chief-of-staff Liam Lynch sent instructions for operations against 'the enemy', which included shooting on sight any TDs who had

Kevin O'Higgins (centre) on the day of his wedding to Bridget Cole on 27 October 1921. In attendance were Éamon de Valera as well as O'Higgins' best man, Rory O'Connor (right)

Close bonds of close friendship that formed during the struggle for independence were broken in the bitter Civil War – none more tragic than O'Connor and O'Higgins'. O'Connor, who was imprisoned in Mountjoy Jail after the surrender at the Four Courts, was executed on 8 December 1922 in reprisal for the killing of Sean Hales TD outside Leinster House the previous day. Minister for Home Affairs Kevin O'Higgins was involved in the decision to execute O'Connor along with three others, Richard Barrett, Liam Mellows and Joe McKelvey. voted for emergency legislation and the destruction of homes and offices of those strongly associated with the state, including the homes of all Senators in the newly-created Free State upper house, which met for the first time on 11 December 1922. Following the killing of Sean Hales TD and the wounding of Pádraig Ó Maille TD on 7 December, the Free State extra-judicially executed four leading republican prisoners in Mountjoy Gaol, which seemed to act as a deterrent to further attempts on the lives of parliamentarians; the campaign against property, however, began in earnest with the burning of the house of Sean McGarry TD in Dublin, which resulted in the tragic death of his seven-year-old son.

By early 1923, the anti-Treaty IRA were demoralisaed, lacked popular support, faced excommunication from the Catholic Church and fought a persistent and better equipped National Army. Republican resistance at this point consisted mostly of as the blocking of roads, attacks on railways, and destruction of bridges, to hinder National Army movement and disrupt the economy. By the end March 1923, IRA leaders in all parts of Ireland had begun to debate whether or not to continue the war. After Liam Lynch was shot dead on the slopes of the Knockmealdown Mountains on 10 April 1923 Lynch's successor as chief-of-staff, Frank Aiken, issued an order to 'Cease Fire - Dump Arms'. There was neither an official surrender nor a negotiated peace settlement, and Treaty issues would continue to dominate Irish politics for decades.

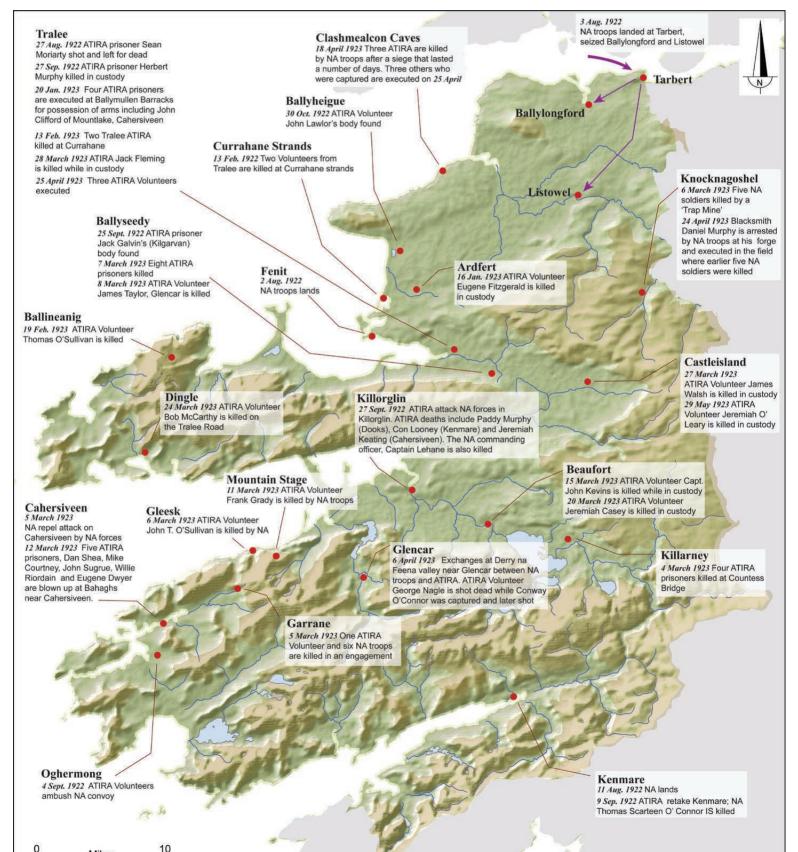

- Document T -

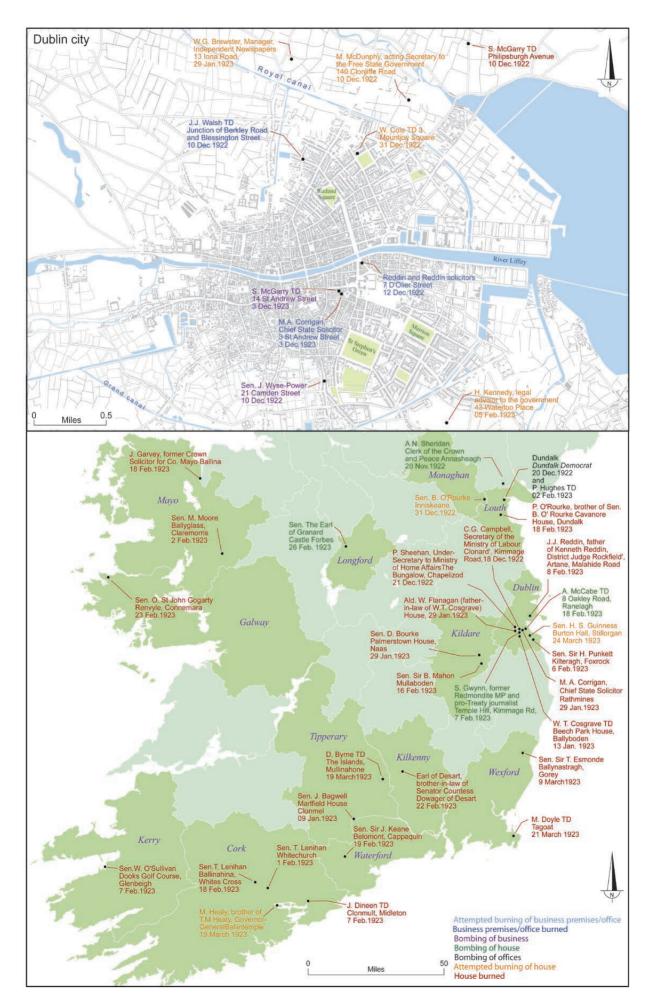

Map Showing the Events of the Civil War in County Kerry

Perhaps nowhere in Ireland was the Civil War fought as bitterly as in County Kerry. The republicans sustained determined armed resistance, inflicted heavy casualties on the National Army, and retained control of large swaths of the county for much of the conflict. Frustrated by their inability to crush the republicans, National Army officers took extreme measures against the IRA, culminating in several unofficial reprisal executions carried out by the National Army in March 1923, including the notorious 'Ballyseedy Massacre'. This map lists a number of violent encounters from June 1922 to May 1923. It omits scores of low-scale IRA ambushes, National Army arrests, and killings committed by both sides. However, it does capture the spread of violence across the county, and highlights some hotspots.

- Document U -

Map showing the main incidences of anti-Treaty IRA attacks (mainly incendiary) on properties of individuals associated with the Free State, December 1922-March 1923

- Document V-

Edited Extract from Bureau of Military History Witness Statement (939) submitted on 12 April 1954 by Ernest Blythe, Member of Dáil Cabinet and the Executive Council 1922

1 7 8 1 3 . 21

12-21

Although the grip of the Irregulars was loosened ... guerrilla activities continued almost everywhere. Gradually, we came to the conclusion that steps must be taken to restore order fully, because what was going on was demoralising large numbers of the people. Ultimately we decided that men found in illegal possession of arms should be brought before committees of officers for trial and, if found guilty, executed ...

The first to suffer under the new arrangements were three young fellows who were caught with guns somewhere in County Dublin. They were duly brought before a committee of officers and sentenced to death. For some reason, Mr. Cosgrave was not able to be present ... and I happened to be the Minister whose duty it was to tell the Deputies that these men were to be executed the following morning. As I stood addressing the party, I noticed dismay on several faces. Pádraig O Máille, whose face very large and fat, sat directly in front of me and I remember that as he listened to the news, his whole visage shook like a blancmange. There were some appeals to the Government to let the young men off, but ... the big body of Deputies were more than tired of long drawn out sniping activities, and were fully prepared to support the Government in its determination that, if necessary, drastic steps should be taken. The executions presumably gave a shock to some members of the public, but many indications reached us to how that the general mass of the people were behind us.

Immediately after the execution of the three young lads, Erskine Childers was found illegally in possession of a pistol, and he became subject to the regulations. He was duly tried, found guilty and sentenced to death. In his case, however, all sorts of forces went into operation to try and prevent his execution ... [but] I think every Minister believed that if we were to reprieve Childers, having executed ignorant ordinary young fellows, our position would be impossible vis-a-vis the public and vis-a-vis the Army. I had no personal ill-feeling towards him at all, and I had never been angry with him for his attitude on the Treaty.... I regarded his execution solely as an act of war, necessitated by public policy and absolutely essential to the country's welfare ...

When the Constitution had been passed, the new Government was established under the title "The Executive Council" ... On the day on which the voting for the Senate took place, Padraig O Maille and Sean Hales were fired upon on the quays ... Sean Hales was killed and Padraig O Maille wounded ... We agreed amongst ourselves that such an attack on the Dáil had to be met by drastic measures and that they should be taken at once... a list of names [was] read out. They were the names of Mellows, Barrett, O'Connor and McKelvey ... the proposal was that they should be executed in the morning without any form of trial ... I was always myself on the best of terms with Liam Mellows. Kevin O'Higgins had been an intimate friend of Rory O'Connor ... [However] we all felt that we were at a crisis in the national history which required us not to shirk any responsibility which came up to us, but to stand out firmly before the people, who were a good deal shaken by the events of previous months ... There is no doubt at all that the summary executions made a tremendous difference in the country. Some people were no doubt horrified, but for others the lesson was that the Government really meant business.

- Document W -

This Resolution was passed by the Dail on 28 September 1922, conferring extensive judicial and punitive powers on military courts, including the controversial right to impose the death penalty that resulted in notorious '77' executions during the Civil War.

THE ARMY EMERGENCY POWERS RESOLUTION

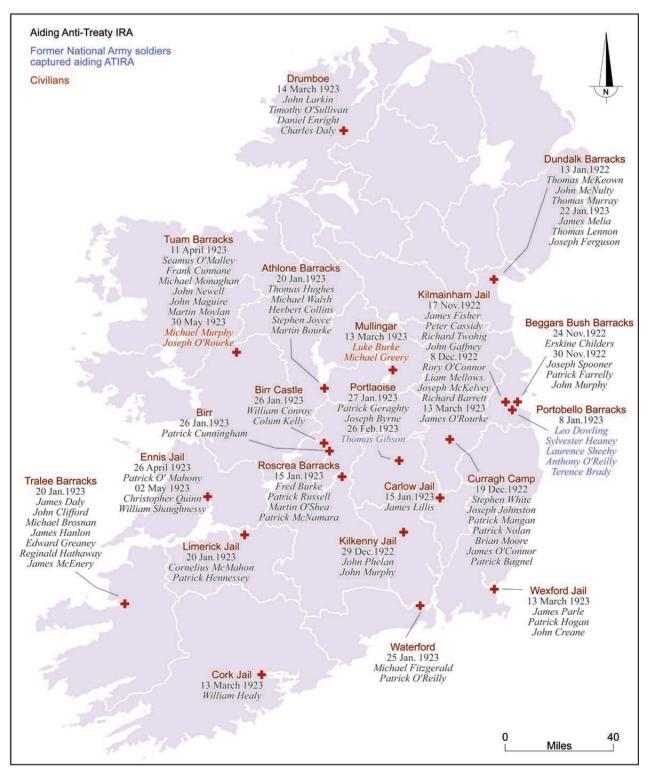

- 1. (1) WHEREAS the Government has entrusted the Army the duty of securing the public safety and restoring order throughout the country and has placed on the army the responsibility for the establishment of the authority of the Government in all parts of the country in which that authority is challenged by force.
 - (2) AND WHEREAS the Army Council has represented to the Government that in order to discharge effectively the duty and responsibility so placed on them it is essential that the Army Council should have the power to set up Military Courts or Committees with full powers of enquiring into charges and inflicting punishments on persons found guilty of acts calculated to interfere with or delay the effective establishment of the authority of the Government, and that the Army Council should have power to authorise the detention in places whether within or without the jurisdiction of the Government of persons in Military custody and power to control the dealing in and possession of fire arms.
 - (3) AND WHEREAS the Government recognising the force of such representations had sanctioned the doing under the authority of the Army Council of all or any of the following matters and things:
 - (a) The setting up of Military Courts of Committees for the enquiring into charges against persons in respect of any of the offences hereafter mentioned ...
 - 1. Taking part in or aiding and abetting any attack upon or using force against the National Forces.
 - 2. Looting, arson, destruction, seizure, unlawful possession or removal of, or damage to any public or private property.
 - 3. Having possession without proper authority of any bomb or any dynamite, gelignite or other explosive substance or any revolver, rifle gun or other firearm or lethal weapon or any ammunition for such fire arm.
 - 4. The breach of any general order or regulation made by the Army Council and the infliction by such Military Courts or Committees of the punishment of death or of penal servitude for any period or of imprisonment for any period or of a fine of any amount either with or without imprisonment on any person found guilty by such Court of Committee of any of the offences aforesaid ...

- Document X -

The eighty-one 'official' executions carried out by the Provisional Government/Free State, 17 November 1922 - 30 May 1923

The policy of executions marked a more ruthless phase of pro-Treaty policy in the Civil War. The majority of the executions were carried out under the emergency powers adopted by the Third Dáil in late September 1922, which allowed for military courts. Death sentences could be issued for the possession of arms or aiding and abetting attacks on the National Army. All those killed, with the exceptions of Erskine Childers, Charlie Daly, Liam Mellows, Rory O'Connor and Joe McKelvey (the latter three executed outside the terms of the law) were essentially IRA foot soldiers. All but eighteen of the executions occurred outside of Dublin, a deliberate policy adopted after the initial dozen men were killed in the capital.

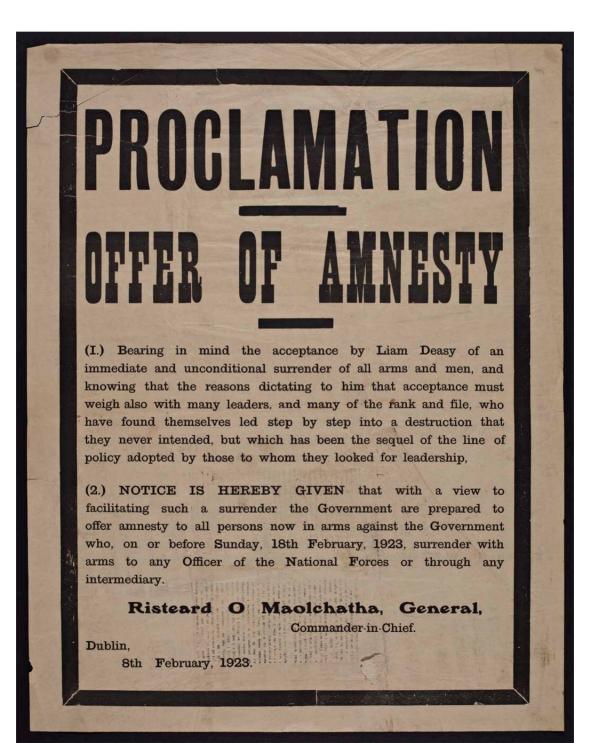

[Source: Breen Timothy Murphy, 'The Government's Executions Policy during the Irish Civil War 1922-1923' (unpublished PhD thesis, NUIM, 2010)]

- Document Y-

Richard Mulcahy's offer of amnesty to anti-Treaty IRA members willing to surrender

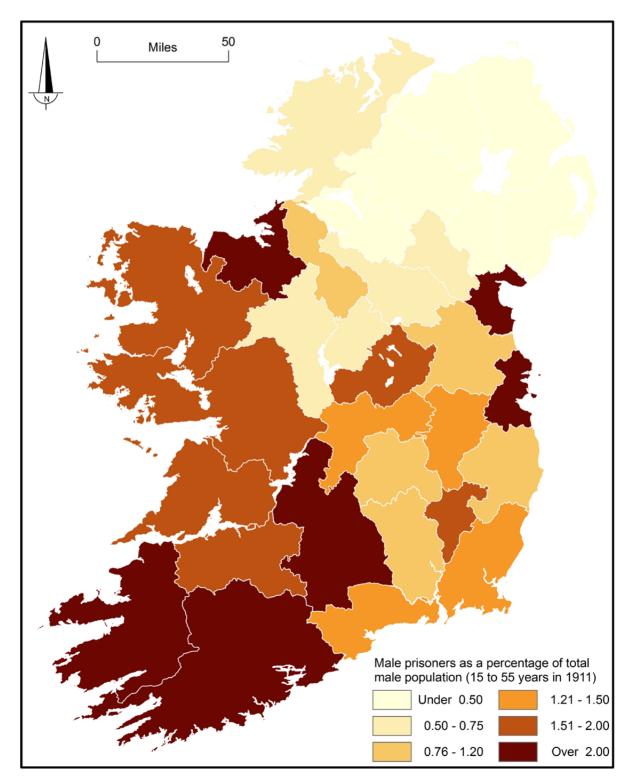

This followed upon the capture of IRA commander Liam Deasy on 18 January in the Galtee Mountains and his decision to sign a surrender and agree to Free State pressure to call on his fellow leaders to do likewise. While being spared execution was a clear incentive, Deasy was already seeking ways of ending the conflict and was extremely pessimistic about republican prospects by the beginning of 1923. Deasy's call had most resonance in the prisons, where a number of prisoners 'surrendered', and amongst an isolated number of anti-Treaty columns, such as that in Leixlip, County Kildare. While the anti-Treatyites fought on until May, the Deasy episode can be seen, in the words of Michael Hopkinson as 'the beginning of the public collapse in the Republican military position.'

- Document Z-

Map showing origins of the over 15,000 male internees imprisoned in the Free State from June 1922 to the final releases in 1924, as a proportion of the adult male population

The number of prisoners in custody at the end of the Civil War (just under 12,000) was almost double the number in prison at the end of the War of Independence. These men and women were held in conventional prisons, internment camps, barracks and (in the case of female prisoners during the latter stages of the war and its aftermath) in the North Dublin Union workhouse, which was converted to this purpose in April 1923. A total of 505 women were interned or imprisoned. 3,101 of the male prisoners were from Dublin, 2,275 from Cork, 997 from Tipperary and 784 from Limerick – all areas that had been amongst the most active during the War of Independence. Counties that showed and upsurge in activity during the Civil War, as indicated by the number of prisoners included Kerry (936), Mayo (860), Louth (537), Sligo (475) and Wexford (407). The county with the lowest representation was Fermanagh with 8. The majority of those deported from Britain, male and female, came from Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Manchester.

[Source: Data kindly supplied by the Irish Military Archives, derived from the Civil War Internment Collection, IE/MA/CW/P]

- Document A1 -

Éamon de Valera's proclamation to the anti-Treaty IRA issued in conjunction with Frank Aiken's ceasefire order on 24 May 1923 ózlaiz na h-éireann.

(IRISH REPUBLICAN ARMY)

Árd Oifig at Cliath

Dept :-

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, DUBLIN

May 24th, 1923.

Ref. No. Order of the Day.

To: All Ranks from the President.

SOLDIERS OF LIBERTY - LEGION OF THE REARGUARD:

The Republic can no longer be defended successfully by your arms. Further sacrifices on your part would now be in vain and continuance of the struggle in arms unwise in the national interest. Military victory must be allowed to rest for the moment with those who have destroyed the Republic. Other means must be sought to safeguard the nation's right.

Do not let sorrow overwhelm you. Your efforts and the sacrifices of your dead comrades in this forlorn hope will surely bear fruit. You have saved the nation's honour and kept open the road to Independence. Laying aside your arms now is an act of patriotism as exalted and pure as your valour in taking them up.

Seven years of intense efforts have exhausted our people. Their sacrifices and their sorrows have been many. If they have turned away and have not given you the active support which alone would bring you victory in this last year, it is because they are weary and need a rest. Give them a little time and you will and see them recover and rally again to the standard. They will then quickly discover who have been selfless and who selfish - who have spoken the truth and who falsehood. When they are ready, you will be, and your place will be once more as of old with the vanguard.

The sufferings which you must now face unarmed, you will bear in a manner worthy of men who were ready to given up their lives for their cause. The thought that you have still to suffer for your devotion will lighten your present sorrow and what you endure will keep you in communion with your dead comrades who gave their lives and all these lives promised, for Ireland.

May God guard every one of you and give to our country in all times of need sons who will love her as dearly and devotedly as you.

EAMON DE VALERA

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS

PHASE III: GUERRILLA WAR FARE

1. According to the map, in what month did most of the IRA attacks in Dublin take place? (Doc U)

2. What type of attack was carried out on H. Kennedy's property in Waterloo place and (b) why do you think it was targeted by republicans? (Doc U) 3. Explain why the types of attack shown on the map would be considered querrilla warfare? 4. According to Ernest Blythe's witness statement, what action did the Provisional Government take in response to IRA querrilla activities? (Doc V) 5. Can you suggest a reason for Pádraig O Máille's reaction to Blythe's news? (Doc V) 6. How does Ernest Blythe's justify the execution of Erskine Childers? (Doc V) 7. What event in Dublin led to the Executive Council's decision to enforce 'drastic measures'? (Doc V) 8. According to Ernest Blythe, was effect did the executions have on (a) public opinion (b) the IRA? 9. Do you consider Document A1 to be a reliable source? Refer to the document in your answer.

Atlas of the Trish Revolution Resources for Schools

10. For what offences could people be tried before a military court after September 1922? (Doc W)

12. When and where were Rory O'Connor, Liam Mellows, Richard Barrett and Joseph McKelvey executed? (Doc X)

13. How many of those executed between November 1922 and May 1923 were civilians? (Doc X)

Your Task

It is 10 April 1923 and Liam Lynch has just been fatally wounded in a firefight with National Army soldiers in the Knockmealdown Mountains. You are senior officers in the National Executive of the Anti-Treaty IRA. During an emergency meeting to decide the future, you compile a list of pros and cons for continuing the fight:

- Step 1. Your teacher will organise the class into groups of four
- Step 2: Using the information in Documents in this worksheet and your own research discuss the reasons why the IRA are in a weak position and should surrender and any reasons or justifications for continuing the fight against Free State forces
- Step 3: Once each group member has contributed to the discussion, complete the pros and cons template on the next page
- Step 4: Once the task is completed, your teacher will ask for feedback from each group

