

Augumented Prescribed Exercise:

A study to determine whether an augmented prescribed exercise programme in the acute hospital setting can shorten patients' length of stay and improve their physical and psychological well-being is also underway. A randomised controlled trial will be conducted to measure the effects of an augmented prescribed exercise program on physical ability, quality of life and health utilisation for frail older medical inpatients.