

Deep Institutional Innovation for Flourishing in Times of Polycrisis

Ian Hughes
University College Cork

Earth System Governance Conference, Bath UK

Session: Flourishing as Adaptive and Reflexive Earth System
Governance: Care, Worldviews, and Institutional Transformation

September 9, 2026

Overview of Presentation

1. Escaping the Neolithic – An Existential Necessity
2. The Flaw in Our Species – Why Do Dominance Societies Prevail?
3. Reimagining Society for Human and Other Flourishing: The DSIS Project
4. Earth System Governance for Human and Other Flourishing

1. Escaping the Neolithic – An Existential Necessity

a) ESCAPING THE NEOLITHIC

b)

The Contemporary Polycrisis

Not only are multiple crises occurring simultaneously, but each crisis amplifies the destructive effects of other crises.

c) DEEP SOCIETAL REIMAGINING

What is needed is a wholesale reimagining of all the social institutions that comprise technological modernity - Politics, Economics, Technology, Gender, Education, and Religion.

2. The Flaw in Our Species – Why Do Dominance Societies Prevail?

a. LEADERS

Dismantling the Violence System that Lies at the Heart of the Neolithic

“The child who has not been loved will burn down the village to feel its warmth”

a. SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Social Institutions that reward narcissism, excessive greed, and violence.

b. FOLLOWERS

An evolved propensity for both cooperation and violence depending on context.

3. Reimagining Society– The DSIS Project

a. Social Duality

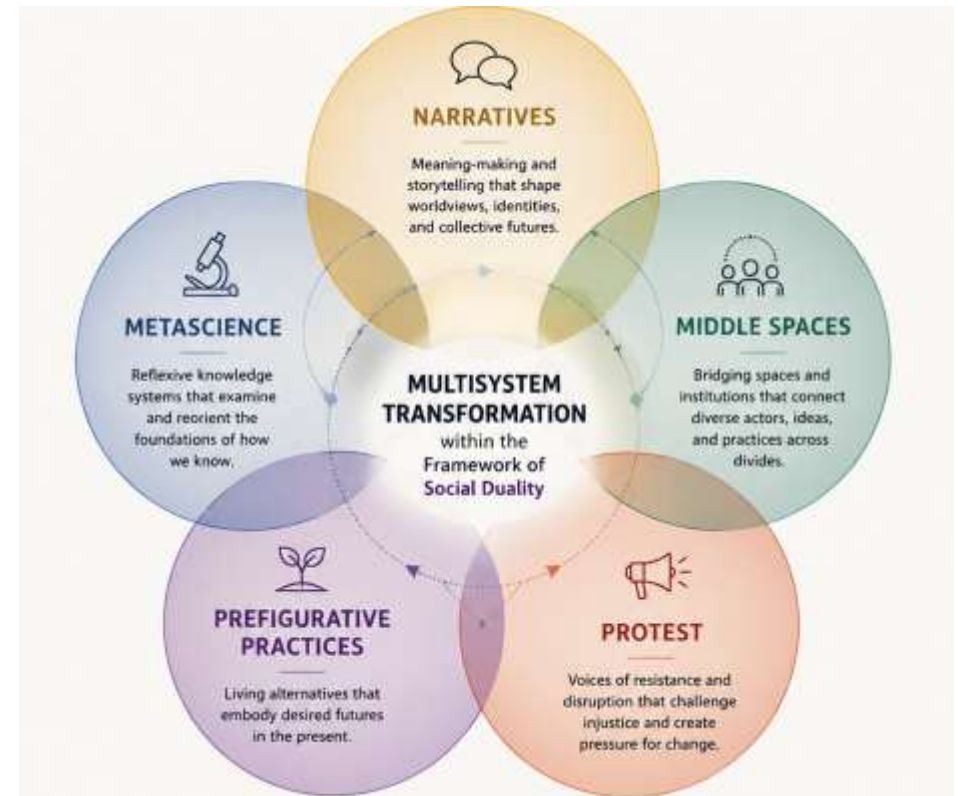

THE
SACRED|ORDINARY

b. Opportunity Space for Transformation

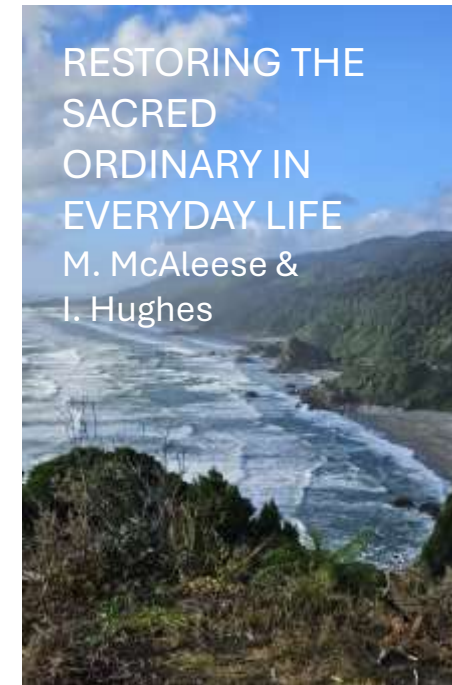

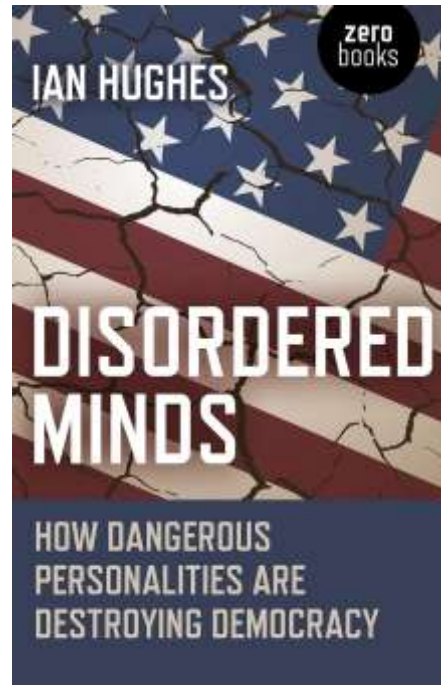

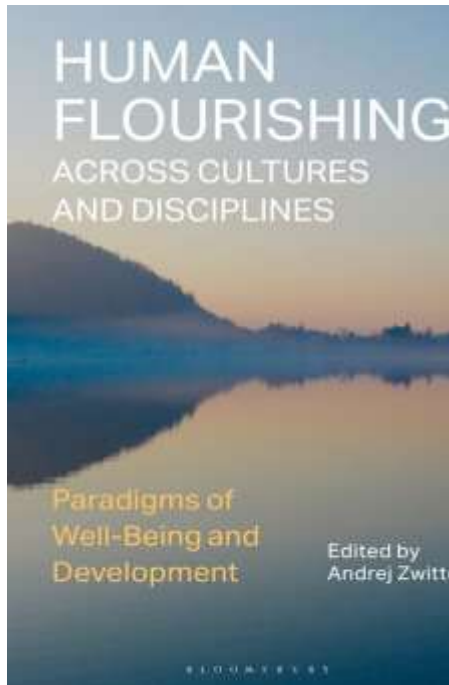

c. Dynamics of Transformation

4. Earth System Governance for Human and Other Flourishing

“[Addressing the polycrisis] will require, among other things, changing the deep-seated social dynamics that are generative of global catastrophic and existential risks” - Van Peborgh.

Thank You!

Special Thanks to Former President of Ireland Mary McAleese

And thanks to UCC colleagues

Edmond Byrne, Maggie O'Neill, Gerard Mullally, Brian Ó Gallachóir, Bob Grumiau and Simone O'Rourke

And international colleagues

Andrej Zwitter, Ariel Hernandez, Wakanyi Hoffman, Takuo Dome and all the authors in the Human Flourishing book.

www.ucc.ie/en/dsis/ email: ian.hughes@ucc.ie